BEST BABY CONTEST NEARS END WITH THE JUDGES' TROUBLES NEAR

Task of Deciding Victor to Be Seen in Pendroy's Window Display of Photographs of District's Most Beautiful Children

EACH CHILD IS A CHALLENGE TO THE EYES

Eagle Rock and Burbank Slow to File Pictures of Their Best Looking Little Ones and Yet May Win on Contestants Entered

The best baby contest of the Glendale district, which includes Eagle Rock, Burbank, Montrose, La Crescenta, Tujunga, etc., is almost in sight of its spectacular climax, when the beautiful baby competitors will pass in review before the judges and the awards will be made. Only ten days remain in which applications can be received.

If anybody imagines the judges will have an easy job he should inspect the Harvard street window of Pendroy's store and the display there made of beautiful children in the collection of photographs by our local artists: Ostrom, at 206 East Broadway; Ralph Brown, 215 North Brand; Glen R. Dolberg, 206½ West Broadway, and E. B. Ellias of 104 West Cypress.

Sixty photographs of as charming children as the sun ever shown upon are there displayed for all the world to see and as a demonstration of the kind of babies Southern California produces.

There will be another big display in this paper. Watch for it. a whole page of lovely babies.

Eagle Rock and Burbank should be more adequately represented than they have been and the mothers of best babies in those cities should lose not an hour's time in putting in the applications and securing photographic orders. Ten days is a very short time and there will be congestion at all the studios unless there is quick action.

Competent judges who have seen some of the babies and the photographs of others, declare that in no place on the globe would it be possible to assemble a finer group of children. For that reason, and because these are the builders of the future, the coming citizens who will represent this district in the eyes of the world, every baby should have its place in the group and its chance at the wonderful array of prizes.

No one has taken a keener interest in the competition than Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pendroy of the Pendroy Dry Goods company. After the first cash prize of $100 offered by the Glendale Press has been announced, Mrs. Pendroy came forward with the proffer of a $100 merchandise prize for the second best baby, and now she is proudly displaying the pictures of the competitors in a conspicuous window on the corner of Harvard and Brand, and is planning another display in the interior of the store.

She declares, and she is right, that nothing the store has done has awakened such interest as has its participation in the best baby contest, and Mrs. Pendroy herself is "just crazy" about the babies. No resident of the district should miss this window display. Also, no mother in the district with an infant between the ages of 6 months and 6 years, should fail to enter her offspring in the best baby contest to close September 30.

ELECTRIC LINE DRIVE MAKES DIRT FLY

Renewed stimulus was given to the campaign to raise the funds necessary for the electrification of the Glendale avenue line by the entrance in the fight as actual workers of Miss Sarah Pollard and Robert M. Gaddis. The services of Miss Pollard as stenographer have been loaned to the railroad committee by the Roy L. Kent company, architects, builders and real estate operators, while Mr. Gaddis' services have been donated by the Fox-Woodsum Lumber company. Miss Pollard is taking care of the stenographis work and the close in collections, while Mr. Gaddis uses his automobile, also donated by the Fox-Woodsum company, for the gathering in of the subscriptions that are in the outlying districts.

The ordinary person would not recognize J. P. Hayselden this morning. He's so nearly tickled to death at having some live, wide-awake workers to assist him that he cannot get rid of that smile of satisfaction. This morning he was on the job earlier than usual. He was behind his desk in the office of Mrs. Mabel L. Tight at an hour when many of the business men of Glendale were taking their "beauty nap."

"Did you ask how things are going?" asked "J. P." "Great! Simply great! The dirt is flying for fair. I told you all along it would only take a few live wires to put this thing over. Miss Pollard and Mr. Gaddis are go-getters from the very start and the way they are lining things up is enough to put courage into a yellow-jacket.

"A number of additional solicitors reported yesterday afternoon and this morning and the amounts they turned in were exceedingly encouraging. A number of the various districts which did not produce a desired amount at the first call are being recanvassed. We are working on the theory that all of the people of Glendale will profit by this line and for that reason all of the people should help pay for it. We want a donation from everyone, no matter how small it may be. There are many, we realize, who are not able to give much, but even a dollar or two given will show that they are with us. Many are able to give far more than they are contributing, and to some of these we will have to make the second call."

It is understood that many of the members of the Glendale Realty Board are still on the job and are doing very effective work. One member stated yesterday that Chairman Hayselden will be surprised when the "actual returns" from the work of the Realty Board members have been totaled.

Word received this morning from the workers in La Crescenta, Montrose and Verdugo Woodlands, each of which section will be greatly benefited by this line, are to the effect that everything is progressing nicely, and that before long the workers of those sections will be given a mighty good account of themselves. The workers in each of these places have organized and are conducting a campaign on a strictly business basis, and not in a hap-hazard manner.

Glendale workers as a whole are "going strong." They realize the importance of securing this line for Glendale, and for this reason they are leaving nothing undone that will bring the drive a little nearer to the goal.

Another nice home is within your reach today.

Are you going to let it slip?

BRITISH LABOR UNIONS FIGHT AGAINST WAR

Trades Congress Unanimous Against Battling

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Stop the war! was the slogan of representatives of 6,000,000 British laborers, as the labor council of the trades union congress met here today.

Leaders of the congress stated their constituents were deadly opposed to military action against the Kemalists in the Near East.

It was anticipated that a scathing manifesto to the government against Near Eastern intervention would be issued by the congress.

Action is to be taken on the resolution of Arthur Henderson, which calls for organization of war protest meetings all over the United Kingdom.

The national joint council representing the entire organized labor movement and laborite members of parliament is to meet tonight.

PEON PANTERS FORM LEAGUE AT THE HIGH

The man who introduced "peon pants" started something.

Threats to assault and forcibly extract the wearers out of the pants have been heard on the high school campus.

Articles (unsigned and signed) have appeared in the Explosion, the high school paper, denouncing and upholding the wearers of said pants, but the wearers of this latest fad are not to be caught napping. A league has been formed providing for the defense of each member. It was organized yesterday when a paper was circulated and signed by over 100 boys.

"I sure pity the party or parties who attempt to part me and my pants," said one of the members.

MERCHANTS' TEAM STARTS DRIVE FOR AID

A drive was started yesterday by John A. Cobb manager of the Glendale Merchants' baseball team, to secure funds for the support of the team.

"We have played 23 games this season, 19 of which we have won, without any outside financial support except the money donated at the games. It costs money to run a ball team and Glendale should support one," stated Manager Cobb.

Many of the merchants intend to mail a check to Mr. Cobb, at 146 S. Brand.

Following is a list of those who subscribed yesterday: Theodore Nichols, Thomas White, Buster Brown Shoe Store, Deleco Tailoring Co., Adolph Zaukman, Grossman-Miller Furniture Co., J. Wallace Plumb, Arthur Dibbern, G. H. Phillips, Wallace Fleer Shoe Co., Walker Jewelry Co., Washer Wilson Co., J. T. Allen, George T. Smith Cox & Johnson.

ELECTRIC LINE TAG DAY URGED

Date to Be Decided Later by Chamber of Commerce Committee

PROPOSED AT FORUM

C. E. Kimlin Moves Plan at Directors' Meet, and It Goes Over

A tag day for the campaign to electrify the Glendale avenue line was decided on by unanimous vote at the forum meeting of the Glendale chamber of commerce Tuesday noon. The date on which the tag sale is to be held will be decided within a few days, but it is definitely known that it will not be later than 10 days from Tuesday, September 19.

In making the suggestion that a tag day be held, Dr. Jessie A. Russell said:

"The women of Glendale are the ones who must hunt up the bargains in the stores—we have to look out for the 49-cent and the 63-cent bargains. This refers to the bargains in the Glendale stores and also in the establishments of Los Angeles when we cannot get the desired articles in Glendale.

"It is perfectly proper, therefore, that we should be interested in clipping a few cents from the transportation charge between Los Angeles and Glendale. I believe the women in general of Glendale should get in this electric line fight. I suggest, therefore, that the heads of the various women's organizations in Glendale be appointed a committee to organize and carry out a tag day at which a charge not to exceed 25 cents for each tag be made. I believe a tag day of this character would aid materially in raising the funds necessary."

As the directors' meeting was still in progress it fell to one of the directors to make a motion to the effect that a tag day be held. This was done by C. E. Kimlin, the motion being seconded by Mr. C. D. Lusby. Mr. G. W. Strang of the International Chemical company agreed to pay for all the tags needed.

This forum meeting proved to be a rousing boost for the new line. In fact, the railroad proposition proved to be the leading topic of consideration. It was taken up and discussed with more enthusiasm than has any subject at the chamber of commerce meetings for weeks.

J. P. Hayselden, chairman of the combined railroad committee, which is working to put this proposition over, when called upon, said:

"It's a question of railroad or no railroad. If you want the railroad you've simply got to get out and work. If you don't let's shut up shop and go home. There's absolutely no use babying along with this railroad proposition.

"I'm a horse for work. I'm willing to work and work hard, but one man cannot put this railroad proposition over in anything like decent time. Give me time and I can put this over alone, but this campaign must not drag on much longer. We've been playing with this long enough. There is only a handful of people who are doing the work. The more workers we get the quicker the money will be raised and the sooner the railroad will be in operation—and that's what we are after.

"We have $9,125 still to raise. It isn't going to raise itself. Twelve of the 122 workers have reported and the average amount secured was $30 per block. This average must be increased. If it is not the line will not get in. Everyone of us must make sacrifices for all will be benefited by this line. I tell you, folks, it's a question of 'railroad or no railroad.' Take your choice. If you don't want it, turn it down; if you do, get in and work and do that right now."

"It is all right to give our unqualified endorsement and our moral support to this proposition," said Roy L. Kent, who was acting as chairman of the meeting, "but these things do not build railroads. We must give actual aid. We must get right down to bedrock and do something that will count. Although I have no property on Glendale avenue, holdings that will be directly benefited by this line, I believe the road is needed by Glendale. What helps Glendale avenue cannot help proving valuable to the western section, and, in fact, all other sections of the city. If it's for Glendale as a whole all of the people should be for it. Helpers are needed and it's up to us to help or provide some one who will. I'm going to start the ball rolling by offering the services of one of my stenographers one-half of each day for a period of two weeks. Who else will jump in and help?"

Mr. F. L. Fox of the Fox-Woodsum Lumber company, offered to furnish a man and machine for one-half a day for a period of two weeks, and George Bently said he would be willing to do anything he can to put the line over in the southern end of the city. Ralph W. Brown agreed to work one-half of each day for several days. William J. Schaefle of 1859 East San Fernando boulevard, offered to give $25 toward the project, and C. H. Kirkman, 141 South Brand boulevard, offered to give $10 toward the project.

A. R. Eastman, president of the Glendale State bank, was selected to work on the committee and to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of David Crofton.

After the discussion on the new line had been concluded, William J. Schaefle brought up the matter of the congestion of traffic at the corner of Los Feliz and San Fernando boulevard on Sundays and holidays. He said he heard that as many as 40,000 people travel that crossing on some holidays. A number of accidents are happening there. He suggested that every motorist be compelled to stop upon reaching the crossing, before covering it.

Jesse Smith, local Ford agent, said he did not think this rule could be made with regard to one crossing without being used in connection with all crossings of the city. Councilman Kimlin said he thought that if this were done the congestion would be greater than ever. He said he thought the widening of Los Feliz, which work would be started before a great while, would relieve the situation materially. He promised to take the matter up at the next meeting of the city council.

L. H. Wilson brought up the matter of the chuckholes at the corner of Park avenue and San Fernando road. He said that a number of accidents were occurring at that intersection every day on account of these holes, and that in his opinion something should be done in this matter by the chamber of commerce. He said that 25,600 autos cross that intersection daily and that at least 20,000 of them cuss the city of Glendale for maintaining a road of this character. He said that at his own expense he filled the holes with concerte, but it was only a short time before other holes developed.

"It is the large trucks that do the damage," said Mr. Wilson, "but we have them and we must make the best of the matter. There are more trucks that travel cross the intersection of Park and San Fernando between the hours of 1 to 5 o'clock in the morning than there are automobiles that run along Brand boulevard between 1 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon. That sounds like a whopper, probably, but I'll pay $25 to anyone who makes a check, providing I'm wrong."

Councilman Kimlin stated that the city is working as rapidly as possible in the matter of the improvement of the intersection referred to.

W. A. Horn stated that the improvement of this intersection is a matter of emergency and, in his estimation, it should be treated as such. He thought the city should get right in and improve this stretch so that fewer people would cuss the officials of the city and Glendale in general.

Several visitors and new members were introduced and given the glad hand, and the announcement was made that Richard P. Hobson will address the open forum meeting of the chamber next Tuesday evening, which will be in the form of a 6:30 o'clock dinner.

SMYRNA RELIEF TO SECURE SUPPORT IN GLENDALE

Nathan Rigdon Appointed Agent of Emergency Committee Here

Nathan Rigdon of Glendale has been appointed chairman of a Smyrna emergency relief committee here. Funds will be received by the chairman specifically for Smyrna relief, to be administered through Near-east relief. All contributions will be transferred at once to the Constantinople headquarters of the relief which serves the Smyrna and Moudania sufferers.

Near East Relief stands ready to transmit overseas any funds contributed for Smyrna relief, says a wire just received from Near East Relief, New York City, at the Southern California headquarters, 517 Wright & Callender building, Los Angeles.

That the desperate plight of Smyrna and Moudania refugees, made destitute by the sudden Turkish victory, will not go unheeded in the southwest is evidenced by the impressive list of chairmen appointed yesterday to raise emergency relief funds in more than 100 cities by the Southern California committee of Near East Relief.

OUTFALL SEWER PLANT THROUGH LOS ANGELES INDICATED BY GRIFFIN

City Engineer of Big City Indicates Radical Change of Front Has Taken Place in Policy of the Metropolis of the Pacific Coast

ADMISSION WITHOUT SUBMISSION IS PLAN

Advocates Conferences Between City Councils to Get Together on Final Plans and Pledges for Accommodation Six Years Hence

The Federated Improvement associations of Glendale last night voted for a general sewer system for the city of Glendale. A committee was appointed to call upon the city council of Glendale to urge them to start negotiations with the city of Los Angeles for the ultimate outfall sewer.

The appointment followed a talk by John T. Griffin, engineer for the city of Los Angeles.

The Federation voted for an activated sludge system to take care of the sewage until an outfall sewer through Los Angeles might be obtained.

Mr. Griffin explained in detail just how the outfall sewer could be used through Los Angeles pipes.

"Los Angeles has voted bonds in the sum of 12 million dollars for the disposal of her sewage into the sea," he said. "This sum is vast enough to include and take care of all area that is tributary to Los Angeles. Every piece of land that sends its water into the Los Angeles river and certain territory on the north side that could not get out other than through it, has been provided for in case that land should come into the city of Los Angeles in the next 35 or 40 years. It is not necessary for these various lands to become a part of the city of Los Angeles. It will never be necessary to change the size of the pipe because it was made big enough to take care of it. It could take care of Burbank, Glendale, San Fernando and other valley towns. What does it mean to Glendale? Is Glendale interested in this proposition? It is in this respect: A day will come a few years from now when Glendale will either be a part of the city of Los Angeles or if not ,the development will be such that there will be no way for sewage disposal available except by outfall. This area will want to put its sewage through main conduit to the sea. Glendale does not want to be a part of Los Angeles, yet wants to use pipe that Los Angeles has. It is very easy, if political powers see it in this light; that as far as drainage is concerned political boundaries do not exist and by Glendale agreeing to pay a certain sum of money for a drainage facility you could then connect to the sewer on an equal basis with the fellow in Los Angeles who paid to have it built by passing a bond issue here. Culver City has just been taken into this proposition at a cost to it of $30.000.

"Glendale would have to pass a bond issue and pay to the city of Los Angeles that amount of money for her portion of the outfall which would be based per population per area.

"Before you decide upon a sewer for your city it would be better to at least open negotiations in this manner. I have just traveled 8,500 miles to find out more about sewers and it has been stated that many cities in the United States are making money from a proposition of this kind. But in the 8500 miles that I covered I found not one that was making money. The cost of treatment of sewage for a period of 25 years would run you three times, if not four times what it would cost to make negotiations with the city of Los Angeles, and to me they are very much in mind today to open negotiations. They would discuss the matter anyway. If you were to install permanently treatment system it might make Los Angeles citizens fight against it. The Los Angeles city council would be more than pleased to talk on this situation of its own bond issue."

Following this talk, Mr. Griffin was open to questions and answered many with great interest. Some of the questions asked and their answere were:

What effect does the district of treatment plant have upon the neighborhood in which it is going to be treated?

Any community where a treatment plant is located, is considered damaged, he answered.

It was stated that Los Angeles takes sewage from Bishop into Los Angeles pipes and Mr. Griffin saw no reason why it should not take that of Glendale.

The argument was brought up that the government might refuse to allow the city of Los Angeles to use the ocean for sewage.

Mr. Griffin answered that Los Angeles had established such a precedent and had its line all installed and had been using it for years and that this would be overcome.

The question was asked if this pipe would be big enough if Glendale became a city of 100,000.

Mr. Griffin explained that it would probably be six years before Los Angeles would be ready to take care of Glendale sewage providing Los Angeles accepted it. Until that time he said an activated sludge system would very likely have to be installed here for the entire city.

Mr. Griffin suggested that the mayor of Glendale with council members and the Glendale chamber of commerce, get together and have the city council pass a resolution or communicate with the city of Los Angeles asking that Glendale be permitted to come into this sewer on the same basis as Culver City, and the engineer would furnish an estimate as to what the cost will be.

The question as to what kind of a plant, as a temporary disposal plant, would probably be permissible, arose.

Mr. Griffin suggested the activated sludge process.

It was asked how much ground was needed for a treatment plant for 30,000 population. Mr. Griffin stated they would need 1 1-2 acres.

Dr. Russell expressed the appreciation of the federation for Mr. Griffin's talk.

Councilmen Lapham and Kimlin expressed their willingness to work with the federation and do all in their power to help matters along. Mayor Robinson was also present and stated that the city council will appreciate suggestions in regard to this, and will act immediately.

The committee appointed by Dr. Russell included the five association presidents, and Secretary Lloyd Wilson and the federated president, Dr .Russell, to act.

SUMMER XMAS TREE PLAYLET TONIGHT

Elaborate preparations have been almost completed by the members of the First Baptist Sunday school of Glendale for the summer Christmas tree and playlet which will be given Wednesday evening, Sept. 20. So far as is known, this is the first summer Christmas tree ever held in Glendale, and judging from the interest that is being shown in this event, the church will probably be packed to the doors long before the program begins.

In connection with this tree, those who attend this concert will give instead of receive. It will be a case of furnish cheer to someone else, rather than receive gladness at the expense of someone. The event is being given with the aim of gathering a large amount of gifts for the Indians among whom the Baptist church is now doing missionary work. Each child and lady attending is expected to bring some gift. It may be in the form of a jar of fruit or a doll, or, in fact, anything that could be used for the sustenance or amusement of the Indians. Already more than a barrel full of gifts have been received, it is understood, and it is expected that those received at tonight's entertainment will bring the total up to three and possibly four barrels.

The play that will be given tonight will be unusually interesting. Intensive study and practice is being given to the piece and at the final practice held last night, it was found that little is needed to make the production perfection itself. This play will be partly in costume, various nationalities being represented.

Everyone in Glendale is invited to attend this unusual program. The gifts that will be received will be sent away so that they will reach the Indians in plenty of time for Christmas. The program will start promptly at 8 o'clock. The church is located at the corner of Wilson and Louise streets.

DR. TINKLER HAS BUSINESS WOMEN AS GUESTS

About fifty members of the Glendale Business and Professional Women's Club and guests were entertained with a party Tuesday evening at the apartment of Dr. Maybell Tinkler in the McElroy building, which proved a delightful affair.

Following a social half hour there was a brief program of a high order which included piano numbers by Fred V. Shuck of the Shuck Music Company; the reading by Mrs. Verna Mitchell of "An Experiment in Matrimony," by Thomas Dixon and "Bedtime"; interpretative dances, "Ecstasy" and "The Balloon" by Miss Dorothy Wright; and a one oct play "Please Pass the Cream" by Dr. Pearl Anderson and Henry Biederman.

Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Wright, Dr. Anderson and Mr. Biederman were from the Emerson School of Expression, Miss Wright and Mrs. Mitchell being members of the teaching staff.

Following these numbers which were thoroughly enjoyed, punch was served and dancing was the order for all who cared to trip the light fantastic, Mr. Shuck furnishing the music.

Preceding the party committee meetings were held at the club house 126 South Maryland, and at the office of Dr. Laura Brown on Brand Boulevard, the committee assembling being "House Committee" of which Dr. Caroline Payne Jackman is chairman; Friendship Committee, Mrs. Allie Buffkin, chairman; Membership Committee, Mrs. Mary Baxter, chairman; Publicity Committee, Mrs. Maude McGhee, chairman; Program Committee, Miss Gertrude Gibbs, chairman; Hostess Committee, Mrs. Elsie Williams, chairman.

The membership committee decided upon a membership campaign, with the membership organized into two teams, the campaign to end with a celebration and entertainment of the winning team on the first anniversary of the organization of the club.

The membership and friendship committees also decided to unite in the giving of a paid entertainment and dancing party at the club house early in October.

AUTUMN SPORT HATS

Autumn sport hats have made their appearance and among the new things are flattering little hats of rows of velvet ribbon stitched together. The colors are particularly good and the hats stand any amount of crushing and packing.

TUESDAY CLUB SHOW FORMS FOR FUND

Events are focusing in connection with the beautiful fashion revue to be given at the Glendale theatre the afternoon and evening of September 26 by Mrs. Earl Pendroy as a benefit for the Tuesday Afternoon club building fund.

Not only will there be a charming musical program in addition to the beautiful fashion pageant, but the artists who will provide the musical and dance solos and other program features will also be included in the revue of costumes provided by Mrs. Pendroy.

Local talent of the best has been engaged and there will be some spectacular surprises. The opening number will be of outstanding interest because it will be a dance created by Mrs. Pearl Keller Brattain for the occasion and executed by advanced pupils of her school, in special Pendroy costumes. It will be an interpretation of a song written by Mrs. Pendroy and set to music by Mrs. L. N. Hagood of this city, whose compositions have already brought her fame.

Other special features are being kept dark for the greater pleasure of the audience, but they will be no less unusual and entertaining.

The matinee and evening performance will be identical, the only difference being that there will be no reserved seats in the afternoon.

That all the children in the Glendale schools may have opportunity to enjoy it, a special matinee price to students of 28 cents has been made.

Adults who are planning to attend the evening performance should not only buy their tickets without delay from Mrs. A. H. Montgomery or other members of the ways and means committee, or purchase at Pendroy's store, but should also secure their reservations for seats at the Glendale theatre without loss of time.

REV. MR. CHRISMAN HONORED WITH RECEPTION

Rev. H. C. Chrisman, new pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, was the honored guest at a reception last night, given at the home of Dr. L. C. Richardson, 1856 South Brand boulevard. Rev. Geo. W. Davis, pastor of the Tabernacle at Los Angeles, is retiring, and he gave the address of welcome, which was followed by fitting response from Rev. Chrisman. H. E. Henderson was in charge of the program.

The church body was represented in a fitting address by Mrs. J. Rhea Baker, and the Sunday school by their superintendent, F. W. Harper. Miss Schafer represented the young people's society.

Rev. Davis was presented with a remembrance and flowers were presented to his wife, Mrs. Davis, and to Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Hinkey, who are the wives of missionaries who filled the pulpit here prior to Rev. Chrisman's arrival. Mrs. Eddings of Montrose officiated in the presentation of gifts.

Miss Lau, a Chinese missionary, was a special guest of the evening.

The Misses Gleiss of Eagle Rock rendered several piano and violin numbers and Miss Smith of Glendale also gave two piano selections.

MRS. CANFIELD TO END HER VISIT

Wife of Founder of Ward Academy, S. D., to Return North

Mrs. L. E. Canfield, wife of the president and founder of the Ward academy, of Academy, S. D., is soon to terminate her visit in the southland.

Mrs. C. M. Thorne, who has had Mrs. Canfield as her guest, told of the remarkable institution of 30 years standing, existing as a monument to President Canfield, who brought this pioneer school into being 30 years ago, before there were any other schools in that part of the country. The institution is fostered by the Congregational church, and offers a regular high school curriculum, with a well established music department. Mrs. Thorne praised the stand the school had taken in offering a field of knowledge to the student, and claimed that it stood as a monument to home missionary work.

Mrs. Canfield is spending a short time visiting friends in Arcadia, and plans to return to South Dakota some time this fall.

Mrs. D. P. Garrett, of Eagle Rock lodge, after returning from an extended auto tour of the northern part of the state, said today that the lodge was enjoying a social vacation, due to the inactivity caused by the heat. She announces that her daughters, Lois, Shirle, and Peggy, have all returned after their wonderful vacation at Avalon. Shirle has only been away two weeks, but the other two girls have been at the island resort for two months.

TRANSLATOR OF FOREST LORE

Government Issues Little Book of Useful Knowledge

We are apt to think that a "translator" is just one who puts a Russian, German or Swedish book into English of about as many pages. But the triumph of real translating consists in first comprehending, then expressing in a clear, untechnical way, some specialist's book or essay. Then the man who reads it has got his start—and may desire to go much deeper into the whole subject.

We say this in order to call attention to a little forty-eight page pamphlet (Department of Agriculture Circular 211). Its title is "Government Forest Work." It contains sixteen short articles, all "put in plain words," all packed brimful of concrete facts which are worth every reader's attention. It is exactly what the title indicates—a simple, practical account of the work, the history, the methods and the ideals of the American Forest service.

Among its subjects are these: "The Forests for Use," "Qualifications and Duties of Forest Officers," "Forest Research," "Practical Information About Woodlands and Forest Products," "Protection of the National Forests." Among the rules for all who go to the forests are these: 'Break your match in two," "stamp out pipe ashes, cigarette stubs, etc." "quench your campfire before you leave." One which applies with especial force to stockmen, landowners and lumbermen is: "Burn your brush in favorable weather" —when it cannot get away from you.

KAISER'S MEMOIRS

Start Next Sunday
IN
Los Angeles Times

From Unlimited Power to Virtual Imprisonment
From Adoring Adulation to Hatred and Suspicion

Apart from the dramatic elements of the narrative, the Kaiser's document furnishes an amazing psychological study, showing the mental processes of the man who thought himself a demi-god and superior in flesh and spirit to all other inhabitants of earth.

He overlooks no loophole to escape condemnation, going so far as to accuse America, the country he once threatened to chastise, but his evasions, arguments and excuses will not be permitted to pass unnoticed. Every chapter will be analyzed by a competent authority, as a result of which it will be found that the arrogant ex-war lord has convicted himself out of his own mouth.

Also Starting in Next Sunday's TIMES

A New Condensed History of California

By Rockwell D. Hunt, Author of "California the Golden"

A picturesque back-journey into early days — short — readable — and freed from unimportant details. To appear each Sunday in THE TIMES' new enlarged 32-page illustrated magazine, a Sunday morning treat for parents, children and all who want to know the romantic history of their State.

The forthcoming issue of the SUNDAY TIMES, with its newly added 15,000 words per day cable and news service from the Philadelphia Public Ledger (an outright addition and not a substitute for other material) and with its children's suplement, big pink outdoor section, feature pages, real estate section, story magazine, farm and garden magazine, society section, 4-page colored comic and six other large parts and supplements, will be one of the most notable Sunday editions ever produced by the LOS ANGELES TIMES.

GLENDALE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS IS EFFICIENT

Commencing Eighth Year Commercial School Has Fine Record

The Glendale Commercial school is now beginning its eighth year of careful, efficient work. Since its organization, many of the young people of Glendale have been fitted to successfully fill positions of trust in the business world. By its method of individual instruction it is able to meet the particular needs of each pupil, thus enabling each to become fitted for the work for which he is especially adapted in an efficient and intelligent manner.

Higher salaries are now being paid to office workers than ever before and greater efficiency is therefore demanded by the business world. This efficiency can only be attained by proper training before the office worker enters upon a business career.

The Glendale Commercial school offers complete courses in all business subjects at a reasonable rate of tuition. Students may enter at any time and progress as rapidly as they are able to master their work. A public stenographic department is maintained by this school, special attention being given to mimeographing.

The Glendale Commercial school is located at 224 South Brand boulevard, over the Glendale Daily Press.

M. E. CONFERENCE IS CLOSING

The conference year for the Methodist church of Southern California is drawing to a close, next Sunday being the last. According to Dr. C. M. Crist of the First church, the year has been one of peculiar success in the local church. Notwithstanding the financial stringency that has been experienced, the year has been a phenomenal one. Over $20,000 have been subscribed on indebtedness of church and parsonage properties, completely providing not only for all indebtedness but also for some necessary improvements, among which is the seating of the gallery.

The financial secretary is this week sending statements to all who are in arrears in the current expense account and the benevolences, with the prospect of having next Sunday a most remarkable response. It will be a red letter day, a day which will fittingly close a most prosperous year.

The annual conference is to be held at Fresno, beginning October 11. It will last one week and will have as the presiding bishop, Wm. A. Quayle.

MRS. GIBSON TO DISCSS MUSIC

Appointed on Committee to Confer With Commissioner of Education

DORA GIBSON
Who is Musical Conferee

Mrs. Dora Gibson, head of the music department of Glendale High, has received a committee appointment from Mr. Olney, commissioner of education, and will meet Wednesday with other members of the committee in the Tajo building, Los Angeles, to recommend courses or changes in existing courses of music in high schools and junior high schools throughout the state.

The recommendations will probably be based on the reports of teachers of music concerning the texts that have enabled them to get the best results in their work.

Music courses in junior high schools are just in a formative state, Mrs. Gibson says, and for that reason the music teachers of the public schools are much concerned.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Fishel left for San Francisco on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will make their home at Avalon, Catalina Island.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fishel graduated in the class of 1917 from Glendale Union high school and the romance which culminated in their marriage started in high school. They are both well known here and have a host of friends. Mrs. Fishel was honored by several showers before her marriage.

Pacific-Southwest Review

By D. H. SMITH

Manager Brand Boulevard Branch Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank

D.H.Smith

In order to advise the 31,000 banks of the United States and Canada of the change of name of the Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank to that of the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank, which change became effective at the close of business last Saturday, September 16, 1922, a letter was recently sent to each, enclosing a booklet descriptive of the Bank and the territory from which it takes its name. The booklet describes the institution formed by the recent merger, as follows:

"The urge of developments in the Pacific-Southwest has resulted in the necessity of the creation of a unified financial system working for the most orderly and rapid development of the entire district. As a result there has been brought about the merger of banks in more than a score of California cities from Fresno south, with total resources approximating $200,000,000.

"In creating this merger no effort was made to achieve 'bigness.' The plan has been to unify some of the best banks of the Pacific-Southwest occupying key positions in the various districts, in order that more complete financial assistance may be given the marketing of the various seasonal crops, and to provide the necessary financial machinery for the upbuilding of this territory upon balanced lines.

"In the area in which this merged institution will carry on its activities directly, the products—agricultural, mining and manufacturing—are harvested and marketed in such seasons that it will make substantially a continuous use of and flatten the curve of peak demands to the minimum. This gives a more economic use and coordinates the funds within the area to the advantage of all concerned.

"It was believed necessary to bring banking institutions together in such a way that the merged institutions would have the cooperative assistance of officers, directors and stockholders who have cared for the needs of their respective communities and have knowledge of their requirements. The mere installation of branches, or the absolute outright purchase of already existing banks, would not accomplish the fundamental purpose. It is for this reason that the present method of cooperation has been worked out, a method by which none of the local control or knowledge is lost through the entering of any particular bank into this system. The old stockholders retain a proportionate interest in the new institution and, accordingly, each new locality has a proportionate interest in the whole operation.

"Not only this, but such a unified banking service is capable of providing agricultural producers, commercial concerns and industrial concerns with a picture of the trend of conditions throughout the entire district—a matter of material assistance in the determination of policies for future operations.

"Not only do these banks operate in the agricultural sections of the Pacific-Southwest and close touch with industrial producers but, located as they are, at the crossways of the commerce of this vast territory, with branches in both Long Beach and San Pedro, they are in a position to watch the water shipments of products entering and leaving this territory—a real service to all commercial enterprises.

"With the area producing, or capable of producing, practically every type of agricultural raw material, mineral or power known to man, it is the ideal point for industrial production. It already has huge consuming markets and these will increase with increasing exploitation of natural resources. It is the most favorably located section of the country for the fabrication of the goods for local consumption, for consumption in the eastern portion of the United States and for consumption in the Orient.

"The Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank operates as a single unit within this great area, in conjunction with The First National Bank of Los Angeles and the First Securities Company, and cooperating with leading banks in contiguous territory, works for the development of each component part of this great empire."

The change of name of this bank to the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings Bank was made in order that its title should properly describe the terirtory served.

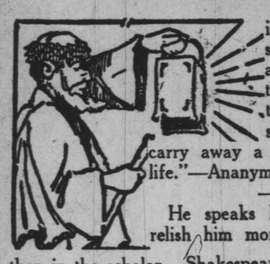
Truths in Epigram



Constantly rising up, a man should reflect and ask, "What good thing have I done this day? The setting sun will carry away a portion of my life."—Ananymous.

He speaks home; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.—Shakespeare.

A DEADLY BUSINESS

Roscoe Sarles, a professional racer of automobiles, was killed the other day. His machine was smashed and its driver burned to a crisp. Thousands were looking on. They were horrified, of course. They would be slow to confess that the possibility of being horrified was what had drawn them to the spot.

Every time a racer is killed in this manner, the occurance being by no means an infrequent spectacle of the track, attention is drawn to the uselessness of the sport. There is difficulty in appreciating what merit it has aside from the immediate commercial aspect. It draws a crowd and the admissions form a fat aggregate.

In aviation, the men who take the business seriously deplore "stunt" flying. This is the type of exhibition in which the operator of the airplane does utterly reckless things in each of which he risks his life and the lives of others.

Professional automobile racing is precisely the type of activity represented by stunt-flying. It proves that certain feats, which it would be unwise and useless to perform, may be performed. The racer who survives one speed contest, is ready to engage in another, until he gets into the one that kills him. Many of the old comrades of Sarles had been slain in the name of sport before his day arrived.

Nobody in the ordinary walks—or rides—of needs or would have a machine to carry him along the roads at 100 miles or more an hour. He would not be allowed to run it if he had it. So to kill any more men in demonstrating that a man and a reckless driver sometimes accomplish that which it is not in any way desirable to accomplish?

THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM

There are phases of the traffic problem that seem to escape the general consideration. How traffic shall be regulated in the city is discussed not merely frequently but all the time. It is a constant and inexhaustible topic. Every driver has had his experience of congested streets, but here at least he has the moral support of the traffic cop, whose mission is the conservation of human lives and the valuable mechanism by which they move about. But the country roads present as many perils, and the absence of the crossing cop accentuates the danger.

Last Sunday evening the highway between Long Beach and Los Angeles presented precisely the conditions that obtain on Broadway in the rush hour. There was a solid parade, automobiles city-bound proceeding, when they could proceed, two, and often three abreast. The one who elected the third row was taking chances with the line moving towards the beach. Progress was slow. Often the vehicles went forward by inches, or feet. A yard was reckoned a fair gain, while a rod was a spurt of speed awakening hope of ultimately getting somewhere. Of course there were small collisions, bickerings, and the exchange of remarks suited only to the occasion, and not for print.

Doubtless many other roads from the various beaches were similarly clogged. Some of them were the scenes of more serious accidents.

What is to be done about it? If there is any relief short of widening the roads 100 per cent the wise man ready to suggest it, would be listened to with respectful interest.

WAR ON NARCOTICS

Official figures show that California is leading in war upon illicit drugs. Part of the reason doubtless is that the illegal traffic has been greater here than elsewhere, and its evils more apparent. To the ports of California come ships from all the seas. Aboard of these, members of the crews perhaps, are men who realize that an amount of drugs such as easily may be concealed on the person, once it finds entry, is a fortune. The nearness of the Mexican border gives another opportunity for smuggling. The Chinese have been in the habit of using drugs, particularly opium, and the spread of the practice was inevitable.

This iniquitous traffic may be greatly reduced in volume. The great essential is to make it unprofitable. If the hawking of the stuff meant a long period in prison, and a fine sufficient to wipe the ledger of all gain, the trade would lessen. The courts have erred greatly on the side of mercy, for the mercy they have extended to sellers of "dope" was reacting to the great disadvantage of the public morals and safety.

It is almost unnecessary to state that nearly every one of the desperate crimes committed is the result of drug addiction. The principals either are inspired by drugs to a desperate courage, or they rob and murder because of desire to get some of their favored poison. The cocaine fiend, for example, rather would lose his life in quest of the material he craves, than to retain life without it. These are facts that ought to be taken into consideration when the fiend in question is caught in his evil ways. Heavy punishment is the only chance he has of being reformed, and is society's one chance of safety from him.

THE CHILL OF SEPTEMBER

The poet who wrote of the cold chilling winds of September, did not have in mind September, 1922 A. D. Quite evidently he was thinking of some other month altogether.

People of this region admit freely and cheerfully that the weather has been hot. Many of them know this, however, only because they have seen the tabulations in the papers. To those who have nothing to do but promote physical comfort, the heat has been no hardship. The nights have brought complete comfort even to the super-broiled who have had to toil in the direct rays if the sun. Happily the humidity that appeared at an earlier spell when the thermometer went on the rampage, has been absent from this visitation.

So much of the summer weather is ideal that people here kick harder than elsewhere at every deviation. They roar in lusty protest against weather as intolerable, when the east and middle west would welcome precisely this brand of weather as a gift from heaven, hailing it with shouts of gladness.

Almost invariably there is a hot space sandwiched in somewhere in the southern California autumn. Residents forget this circumstance regularly. Every season it comes upon them bringing surprise. They declare profusely that they had never seen the like. They merely forget. If they didn't, they would not be caught in the annual sloughing of the straw hat just before the time it is likely to be needed.

A sad feature of a hot day, of any hot day, is that the perspiring citizen, mopping his brow, must listen to the chrip of the moron who queries "Is it hot enough for you?" If this destroyer of human happiness could be abolished, the brief visits of Hi. Temperature to this community would not be at all difficult to endure.

Breaking Up the Atom

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Gentlemen of science are now telling us that the greatest of all forces is atomic energy.

Somehow though the process of reasoning is beyond the ordinary mind, there are some twenty billion calories contained in each gramme of coal. The scientists hasten to add, however, that there is not the slightest indication that we shall get at this supply.

We cannot, however, resist the temptation to imagine what would happen if we could.

An ordinary coal bin would contain enough energy to supply the whole world for an immeasurable time.

According to Moszkowski, all the machines of the world could be run, all wares manufactured, all railways and boats could operate without expense just by tapping the atom.

House fires would vanish and all the labor at present occupied in mining coal would become free to cultivate the land.

There would be no more coal strikes.

Human beings would hardly have to work at all, but could devote their time to the study of science, or the learning of new dance steps, according to their taste.

All this would come along with the new physics, with its high "C," the velocity of light to the second power, the mysterious factor of this secret store of energy.

The only trouble is that if we got to using this enormous power it would probably mean destruction in the hands of the human race at its present low state of morals.

Sometimes we see stars appear in the heavens, and then become extinguished, and we infer a world catastrophe. And it is not unlikely that such a thing might occur to this planet.

"No discovery remains a monopoly of only a few people," says Moszkowski. "If a very careful scientist should really succeed in producing a practical heating or driving effect from the atom, then any untrained person would be able to blow up a whole town by means of only a minute quantity of substance. All the bombardments that have taken place since firearms were invented would be more child's play compared with the destruction that could be caused by two buckets of coal."

The mathematical physicist, Weyl of Zurich, points out the results of such an appalling liberation of energy. To put such a force in the hands of human beings of the moral grade they now are would be like arming a company of madmen with machine guns.

The English scientist, Rutherford, actually succeeded in splitting up the atom.

Einstein declares that the problem of getting an unlimited supply of energy from the atom is within the realm of possibility.

Also there is another cheerful thought. If a human being intentionally begins the disruption of the atom, Nature might automatically continue it, as a great conflagration extends from the beginning of a mere spark.

And there you are.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON
DISCUSSION CLUB.

Henry J. Thompson
(Find the error in this article)

(Note: The following letter is reproduced word for word as it appeared when received. It was written in lead-pencil.)

"Once I remember as a lad laughing at Mr. Yankee Doodle who couldn't see the town for the houses and I seem irresistably constrained to smile at the clipping from your paper of the 18th anent the correct form of expression. The expert on the right word said: 'Yesterday's Error: "Will you kindly let me know through your column which expression is correct? 'He dove into the water'; or, 'He dived nto the water'." Correctly written: Will you kindly let me know through your column which expression is correct: "He dove into the or, 'He dived into the water'." Correctly written: the word 'dove' is a slangy colloquialism which is not recognized by correct lexicographers and may not be in some dictionaries at all . Now if I were the expert questioned in such diction I think I would have endeavored to answer the question as well as to pass on the correctness of the phraseology by saying 'He dived into the water', is the right way to say it. owever, there are those who would 'Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may', or let the quips fall where they may as B. L. T. woud have said it."

Mr. Nicholson

Mr. Thompson apparently did not see the paper and "The Right Word" the day previous to the publication of the excerpt quoted. In this previous article "dive" and "dove" were discussed at length, and "dove" described as colloquial and improper. The corrections made in the foregoing excerpt had to do with punctuation, merely a criticism of the structure of the correspondent's composition, his query having been answered the day before. At any rate we all agree on "dived."

Suggestions for Thompson: Don't write in lead-pencil. Indent your paragraphs in a letter written by hand. On such diction is better than "in such diction." Don't put a period between your subject and its predicate verb as you did after "water." There is still another error I have not mentioned.

THE LISTENING POST

My boy, here is life.

It stretches away before you with many turns and windings of the road.

Strain your eyes as you may you cannot see the end of the road.

Struggle as you may you cannot escape the journey.

* * *

There is only one gate by which you may leave it.

And that gate will open for you in due time and not till that time will the journey be done.

Beside the road are green fields and running streams.

And great trees arch sometimes over the highway of it.

* * *

As you journey you will find the skies sometimes gloriously blue and clear.

Some perhaps mournfully gray and overcast.

For life is of many things.

And all of them you will encounter upon your journey through it.

* * *

There are friends waiting with firm hands to aid you in time of trial and trouble.

And there are dangers that sometimes menace you.

Pleasures that delight you.

There are lures that may weaken and waste you.

And there are tasks that will strengthen and lift you.

* * *

There is work that will dignify you.

There is faith that will sustain you.

There is hope that will lead you on in time of trial.

There is promise that will comfort you.

And there is love that will rejoice you and make you glad.

* * *

For it is all on the way of life:

The joy and the sorrow.

The temptation and the renunciation.

The success and the failure.

The love and the grief.

The sun and the rain.

The storm and the calm.

And there is the long road winding and turning and leading through it all.

* * *

It is necessary to have faith in it and its purpose, otherwise we shall be idlers and mere pleasure seekers.

It is necessary to have courage, otherwise we shall fail in times of its trial.

It is necessary that we have love, otherwise it will be sterile and of no worth.

It is necessary that we have purpose, otherwise we shall stumble through it like blinded moths.

* * *

It is necessary that we have sorrow, otherwise we shall grow arrogant and disdainful.

It is necessary that we have obstacles to overcome, otherwise we shall grow soft and weak.

It is necessary that we know misfortune, otherwise we shall lack sympathy.

And so we shall travel and stumble and rise again and labor and hope and love and grieve and understand.

* * *

No man knoweth the way of it.

There may be accident or mischance.

There may be overwhelming storms and deafening thunders and lightnings that blast and blind.

Or there may be fair skies and still waters and green fields and gladness.

* * *

But whatever it may hold for us, we know that it has purpose in it.

That there is work to do.

That courage and faith will overcome difficulties.

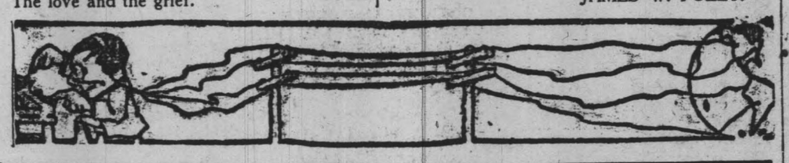
That it is to live as most happily we can.

So we shall hope and labor and love and have faith and courage and purpose.

For these are the stuffs of which good men have been made.

The treasures that abide on the journey.

JAMES W. FOLEY.



SONGS OF THE POETS

Song—Hartley Coleridge

She is not fair to outward view
As many maidens be,
Her loveliness I never knew
Until she smiled on me;
O, then I saw her eye was bright,
A well of love, a spring of light!

But now her looks are coy and cold,
To mine they ne'er reply,
And yet I cease not to behold
The love-light in her eye;
Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are.

Einstein's Fateful Day is Come

By EDWIN E. SLOSSON

On Sept. 21, today the theory of relativity will be put to the proof. After today we may perhaps know whether Einstein is to be ranked with Copernicus and Newton among those who have revolutionized man's conception of the universe or whether he will be regarded merely as the author of an ingenious mathematical theory of limited applicability to reality.

For the last three years the theory of relativity has been the topic of lively discussion extending far beyond the scientific circle for the public realized that some interesting issues were somehow involved in its incomprehensible mathematics. More than a thousand books and uncountable articles have been published on Einstein, all sorts, pro and con, physical and metaphysical, experimental and speculative, serious and frivolous. Prizes have been offered to anyone who could explain it in ordinary language. Personal, political, religious and racial passions and prejudices have been aroused. Einstein was the first German scientist to be welcomed since the war in England, France and the United States, but in his own country he has to go into hiding to escape assassination by the junkers.

It is a remarkable example of how the progress of science may continue in spite of political conflict that during the World War Einstein should have sat quietly in his study in Berlin thinking out his theory and that during the World War English astronomers should have been quietly studying his work and preparing to put it to the test at the earliest opportunity.

This opportunity came on May 29, 1919, when there was a total eclipse of the sun. For Einstein had predicted that when the stars about the darkened disk of the sun were photographed, they would appear as though pushed out of their positions. Just as when a dirty and malodorous man gets on a street car, the other passengers move away from him, those nearest naturally moving the most. This is one of the consequences of Einstein's theory of relativity, which is designed to supplant, or at least to supplement, Newton's theory of gravitation.

According to Einstein a ray of light from a star passing close by a heavy body like the sun is drawn out of its straight course, a little, somewhat as though it were a stream of material particles but to a greater extent than Newton's law could allow for. To an astronomer looking up at the star along this crooked path and not making allowance for the bend it would seem that the star had been moved away from the sun a minute distance, (1.74 seconds of arc). Of course this effect is the same at all times but it can only be observed when the sun's disk is completely shadowed from us by the moon's coming between.

So the British astronomer royal, Professor Eddington of Cambridge, sent out two eclipse expeditions in 1919 to points where the eclipse could be observed, one to the west coast of Africa and the other to the east coast of Brazil. When he came to develop and measure up his photographs he found that the stars about the darkened sun were displaced in the direction and close to the amount predicted by Einstein.

This was good evidence in Einstein's favor but scientists are cautious creatures and not all of them were ready to accept so startling a theory as this without further confirmation. The weather was very cloudy in Africa and the only good photograph obtained at the South American station was one taken with a four-inch lens and showing seven stars around the sun to compare with the photograph of the same stars taken when the sun was in their midst.

But there has been no total eclipse observable till this year and this is not so good a one. There are no bright stars near to the sun, in fact only one visible to the naked eye among those close enough to the sun so their displacement can be measured. But there are four or five faint stars that may be caught on a sensitive plate with a good telescope if the weather permits.

Unfortunately too, the eclipse occurs in a highly inconvenient part of the earth. Its track is along the Indian Ocean and through the heart of Australia where there are no observatories and few people. The best point is on Christmas Island lying west of Australia and south of Java. This island only measures eight by 12 miles and has a population of about 250 according to the latest census. But its population must be increased now by at least 10 per cent, for the British, German and Dutch expeditions are stationed there. Christmas Island is a favored site for it is in the middle of the track of the eclipse. The darkness here lasts five minutes and astronomers can do much in five minutes. An expedition from the Lick Observatory, California, is stationed on the west coast of Australia and the Observatory of Adelaide has sent a party into the arid interior of Australia which involves five weeks of travel by camel train but which is pretty certain to get cloudless weather.

If the eight astronomical expeditions now in the field bring home confirmation of the results of the eclipse of 1919 then we may have to get used to all sorts of queer ideas, besides crooked beams of light in empty space. We may have to give up the force of gravitation and the ether and the constancy of mass and the distinction between matter and energy. We may get to talking about the curvature of time, the weight of heat, kinks in space, atoms of energy, four dimensions, world-lines, and a finite universe. We may be called upon to come to conceive of arrows that shrink and bullets that get heavier the faster they travel; of clocks that go slower the faster they travel; and of a future that turns back and tangles itself up in the present.

But we better not bother about these things till we have to. Perhaps September 20 was cloudy in the Indian Ocean, or so sunny that the plates will be fogged. Or the stars may be found in their accustomed places just as if they had never heard of Einstein. In that case we will not have to learn the non-Euclidian geometry but be content with the kind we know—or, to speak more exactly, the kind we got grades in at school.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The futility of trying cases in the newspaper often has been mentioned. It could not be more markedly futile than the practice of not trying them in the courts.

HENRY JAMES

There is a woman in this county charged with a particularly hideous murder. Had the indictment been brought in a country where murder is considered to be a serious crime, and treated as such, either she would have been hanged long before this, or, vindicated, have gone her way rejoicing.

When the prisoner first was arraigned a day was set for her trial. By a method that has every aspect of deliberation, she created a condition that has led to postponement. Knowledge as to whether, when the second date has arrived, she will be in a mood to let the course of justice proceed, of course must await the indication of her pleasure.

In the judgment of the average layman, whose idea is that the law is something to be enforced, and not to be played with by trick attorneys, there was not an iota of excuse even for the first delay. If the woman is guilty the public demand is for her punishment. If she is innocent, it is a cruel hardship to keep her in jail where the associates are so undesirable.

This is written as the day is warm, and the rays of the sun coming from windows on the south side of the room have all the pleasing characteristics of a blast direct from a furnace.

Three stories below there is boiling under the windows a more stinking cauldron than ever held witch's brew. Perhaps it contains different elements from those compounded so deftly by the hags of Macbeth's day, but they are repellent to the senses.

The black smoke rises and invades the room in volume. It blinds, chockes, suffocates. To shut the window is to perish. To leave it open is to wonder why the boon of perishing is withheld from suffering mortality.

The men stirring the ebon kettle of horror state that they are going to mend a roof. Must well-meaning citizens be sacrificed that a mere roof shall be made whole? Why not mend it with something that does not stink?

Considering the matter in all possible soberness, if men are to have the privilege of boiling stuff in an alley, and the stuff is obnoxious, they ought to be forced to erect a chimney to carry the fumes above the level at which men dwell and have a right to dwell in comparative peace.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Last time I saw Little Mac he was as fat as a little pig. His eyes almost closed with fatness and his tummy was as round and protuberant as an apple. But he said he didn't feel very well.

"I have no appetite," said he. "I sit down to the table and eat, of course, but I never am really hungry. Every afternoon I have a blinding headache, too. Sometimes I am forced to quit work and go home and lie down."

No doubt Little Mac had a lot of good advice from his doctors, for he changed doctors every week or so, warning each that if he didn't produce a proper cause for these symptoms he would be dropped from the payroll. But it was not until Molly got on the job that Mac began to pick up.

"I must get some new clothes," said Little Mac one day. "I'm outgrowing these."

"You'll not," said Molly. "You keep those clothes and shrink to fit 'em You're eating too much That's all that is wrong with you."

Molly is a bully when she gets started; although the casual onlooker, viewing Little Mac's six feet of hairy strength and his pronouncedly undershot jaw would hold him to be the original caveman. Shame put Little Mac on a morning diet of fruit and one cup of coffee—one cup, mind you—and one slice of toast.

"For lunch, one glass of buttermilk and no more," said Molly.

There was a little while during which Little Mac resisted, but Molly never quits, any more than a bulldog does. Also, as she was losing her own lovely figure and wanted to regain it, for it had been well spoken of in the most prominent dressmaking circles, she dieted right along with him. Today she looks like a young and slim Diana, and all that foolishness about rings and dark circles under the eyes is just foolishness. For she has none of them. And Little Mac is slender, muscular, and full of pep. He never has a headache, and when he gets home at night he has an appetite that would turn the edge of a razor.

"One slice of bread, no potatoes, no peas, no beans," says Molly. "And no pies and no cakes."

The funny part is that Little Mac says that he likes to diet. He gloats over the loss of that stuffed feeling he used to have.

TAX DRIVE AT LIGHT BOATS

Those Under Five Tons Must Be Reported to Revenue Collector

Collector of Internal Revenue Rex B. Goodcell yesterday completed plans for a drive directed against approximately three hundred owners of boats of over five net tons who have not registered as required by law.

Although a boat of over five tons, if used exclusively for trade or commerce, is tax exempt, but the owner is required to make a complete return and register. The return for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923 must be filed during July 1922, provided the boat was used during July, 1922. If the boat is placed in use during a month subsequent to July, return must be filed during such month. Return is not required with respect to boats of "not over five net tons and not over 32 feet in length."

Several hundred boat owners who have failed to register are now liable to a penalty of not more than $1000 each.

Collector Goodcell advises delinquents to get in touch with the internal revenue office immediately and thereby avoid further penalties.

A CHOICE OF SIZES

NIGHT HIGH IS TO HAVE STRONG PROGRAM

While the full program for the classes of the night school of which A. L. Ferguson is principal has not been completed for announcement, some things in regard to the curriculum have been definitely decided. Mr. Ferguson reports, for instance, that the board has been fortunate enough to secure again this year Mr. Brockway, of the Harrower laboratory, whose work as a teacher of Spanish was so very satisfactory last year to students and faculty. It will be a strong feature this year and an effort will be made to satisfy all the demands for classes. Students will be especially forunate in having a teacher who understands commercial demands but who is also well up in the literature of the language.

Paul E. Webb will teach mathematics and an attempt will be made this year to cover more than last, especially in the regular arithmetic course. There has been some demand for advanced mathematics and an attempt will be made to satisfy that demand if possible.

As last year, bookkeeping and penmanship will be in charge of Preston A. Fullen. The enrollment and attendance in these subjects last year was remarkable and kept up until the very close of the school. In view of the very satisfactory results achieved by pupils last year it is expected these courses will be full to overflowing.

George O. Lockwood will be in charge of evening work in mechanical drawing and if the demand for this work is as great as it was last year, it will probably be necessary to add another teacher to the force in order to take care of all the students asking for this special subject. Last year's enrollment was large enough to justify the employment of two teachers for the entire year and undoubtedly there will be an increase here as in other departments.

The auto shop will again be in charge of Bert Rolf. Everything possible will be done to take care of all who enroll, but there is a grave question whether the equipment will be sufficient to accommodate all the students enrolling.

Walter Gorman will have charge of wood-working classes and if the enrollment is as heavy as last year it will be a case of another department taxed to capacity. Mr. Gorman's work is of a very practical nature and those who desire instruction along this line will pass up a splendid opportunity if they do not take advantage of the course here offered.

The machine shop will be in charge of Morgan Smith. In this line there will be greater opportunity than last year because of the added equipment and machinery adequate to take care of all the work that could be turned out in any up-to-date shop. The enrollment in this class will be limited and those who wish to take the work should be on hand early.

Shorthand and typewriting will be taught and there will be classes in dressmaking and sewing but just who the instructors will be has not been determined. Details of gymnasium classes for men and women are also to be worked out. Announcements will be made the latter part of the week in regard to these and other subjects and classes will open for enrollment the beginning of next week. Advance registration will not be necessary. Registration will be taken care of on the nights and in the classes in which the students enroll.

As soon as the schedule is printed, all persons wishing to attend the school can decide what subjects they wish to take and having decided can come to the school on the nights those subjects are taught and enroll.

It will be the policy of the night school not to start classes for a less number than 25, except in subjects where the equipment is limited as for example the auto and machine shop work. It will also be the policy to discontinue classes when the enrollment falls below 10.

TRI MU CLASS SEEKS NEW MEMBERS

The Tri Mu class of the First Baptist church of Glendale, corner Louise and Wilson streets, is making an especial effort to bring its membership up to 150. Next Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock being named as the closing date of the campign. Each member of the class has pledged himself to bring two or three new members and it is expected that the class room will be crowded next Sunday morning.

The Tri Mu class is composed of red blooded young men of Glendale who gather every Sunday morning for Bible study. The discussion plan of study that was adopted several months ago is proving to be very popular among the young men of the class and to the visitors, several of whom attend the class each Sunday. C. B. Elliott, a capable Bible student, is teacher of the class and he sees to it that there are no dull moments throughout the Bible study period. Several interesting numbers, in adition to the Bible discussion, are being arranged for Sunday morning. The class will take up promptly on the 9:30 hour, and will continue for thirty minutes, after which the doors connecting the young men's room with the auditorium will be thrown open for the annual rally day exercises of the entire Sunday school. All men between the ages of 18 and 50 years are invited to meet with the Tri Mu class any Sunday, and especially on next Sunday morning, when the unusually pleasing program will be given.

GLENDONIAN CLUB HOLDS BIG STAG PARTY

The Glendonian club, a jolly bunch of Glendale's young men, met for a banquet and social evening last night at the Broadway Inn. There were 19 members present.

Tommy Griffiths is president and he was in charge of the meeting. Following the dinner, plans were discussed for their next dance, to be held the second Friday before Hallowe'en, October 20, at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. This will be a jolly affair, as have been all of the club dances.

Guests last night were Harry Merriken, George Baxter, Al Beede, Walter Eli, Simons Eli. Al Rattray acted as toastmaster.

A musical program was enjoyed, Jerry Parker and Al Rattray rendering several piano numbers and Floyd "Slim" Carmack giving a dance.

GLENDALE MUSIC CLUB DIRECTORS MEET

At a preliminary and quite informal meeting of the board of directors of the Glendale Music club held Tuesday afternoon at the high school, program plans for the coming year were discussed and the regular official board meeting was set for the third Tuesday afternoon of each month to be held in the music department of the high school.

Tentative arrangements were made for the opening concert to be given the first Thursday evening in October by Charles Wakefield Cadman, assisted by the Indian princess who so beautifully interprets his Indian songs. She will be appropriately costumed and it will be a charming beginning of the club year.

Other artists with whom negotiations are in progress are: Claire Forbes Crane, pianiste, whose playing created such a sensation in the Hollywood Bowl concerts. She will be accompanied by a baritone opera singer from the French Opera company of New Orleans, Richard Montiel. Others expected to appear in programs are Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lott, baritone and pianiste of Los Angeles; Miss Grace Jess, who has a very beautiful program of folk songs presented in costume, and featuring French, Italian, Spanish and Russian music; John Smallman, conductor of the Los Angeles Oratorio society, and A. Simonsen, considered the finest cellist on the Pacific coast.

Considerable eastern talent will also be secured and the outlook is bright for a wonderful program year for the club.

All who desire to become members should remember that the initiation fee which has been $2, will be increased to $4 the first of October and should make their applications for admission before that date if they wish to take advantage of last year's rate. The yearly dues are $4, payable semi-annual.

GREAT RACING FILM AT THE GLENDALE

"When Romance Rides," by Zane Grey, a Hampton Production

One of the greatest racing films ever made is at the Glendale theater this week and should appeal to every person who likes horses and rapid action melodrama in this screen bill of fare. It is called "When Romance Rides" and is a Benjamin B. Hampton production, released by Goldwyn, founded upon Zane Grey's most widely read novel, "Wildfire." Thrill follows thrill in this excellently acted photoplay which boasts a cast including Claire Adams, Carl Gantvoort, Jean Hersholt, Charles Arling, Harry L. Van Meter, Frank Hayes, Tod Sloan, the famous jockey, Babe London, Mary Jane Irving and two of the most wonderful horses which have ever appeared on the screen.

"When Romance Rides" may be summed up as the most colorful and swift-moving of Zane Grey pictures (all founded upon Zane Grey novels, and the Zane Grey novels are the most widely read of any author's in the country). The horse race at the rodeo when Claire Adams rides Wildfire in the free for all race to beat the villain at his own game, is almost as good and as thrilling as the real thing.

But the race fades in power before the big climax in which the kidnapped Lucy is tied to the back of a horse by a half-witted man and would have been killed in a plunge over the precipice had not Carl Gantvoort rescued her in the nick of time.

TENNANT - HOGAN NUPTIALS HELD AT HOLY FAMILY

The marriage of Miss Margaret Tennant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Tennant of 317 East Elk street to William Hogan of Cleveland, Ohio, was solemnized this morning at 7:30 at the Holy Catholic church with Father James O'Neill officiating. Only the immediate family of the bride and a few friends were present as witnesses. Miss Robinson and Mr. Scott of Los Angeles served as bridesmaid and best man.

The pretty bride was gowned in a charming going-away sports costume of orchid crepe de chine, with white silk sweater and a white picture hat.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Hogan left for a honeymoon at Catalina.

Mr. Hogan, who is a newcomer, is so much pleased with Southern California and with Glendale in particular, that he and his bride have decided to make their home here. Mr. Hogan expects to go into business in some line. After their return from Catalina they will be guests in the Tennant home until they decide in what part of the city they desire to reside.

The Fur-Coated Crawlers

By JOHN BRECK

Among the last of creation to feel the wanderlust of spring are the caterpillars. Just as the leaves get into their best working order they are despoiled by the hosts of the enemy. Many insects still cling to the old wisdom that the young should be neither seen nor heard. And the squirmy infants obey, "by their evil works only shall ye know them"—unless ye be of the grub-hunting profession. For nature has her guards; from the mole to the squirrel, from the wild duck to the warbler; the toad to the tree-lizard, and the burrowing beetle to the flying wasp, they scour the country from root-hair to leaf-tip in search of them. But the furry-coated crawlers have no fear. They march with all boldness of an army quartering itself upon a populace which cannot retaliate.

Here goes one, grand enough for a colonel at the very least. Deep tufts of golden fur are laced in a row down the back of his bright blue uniform, with a corresponding row of white ones on either side, which add to his swagger as he steps along in six tiny boots. His fore-paws, though he crawls on them, of course, wear shiny black gloves. Black braiding outlines each tuft into a square, touched with a spot of orange in each corner, and a shako of long black hair hangs over his velvet eyes. Soon he will pitch his tent and retire to await his full promotion to the rank of Flying Moth.

Who is he? For the same caterpillar may wear various insignia before he is grown. He is kin to those who hatch from the enormous gray silk barracks which hang from the branches of the oaks or the apples, denude the walnuts. His hirsute grandeur marks him as a touch-me-not of the first order. Of course Woolly Bears, the familiar red and black, or the creamy arctic-looking ones, do not hurt. But try an Io, set about with tiny sea-urchins, or a spiny young Vanessa butterfly in the making, or the bristly browntail—poison ivy is tame by comparison.

Who is to stop them? Few but the oriole and the cuckoo stand ready to give them the birds' blessing—a kiss of the beak and a gulp down the throat—perhaps without Mother Nature's permission. She doesn't want the birds to eat them now. They are her private hatcheries for the winged fiends who hold the crawlers in check. Their furry coats are an excellent protection for the cocoons of the chneumon fly which hatch upon them and feed at second hand. But the ichneumon only sets the fashion for a host of others. The chances are nine out of ten that our martinet will never live to marry. His mate may lay enough eggs to insure a whole regiment of successors—but they are the chickadee lookout. And he has all winter long to find them.

VON KLEINSMID IS INVITED TO BRAZIL

To Attend Conference of Americans and Deliver Paper

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20.—To President von KleinSmid of the University of Southern California has come the honor of being invited to attend the Twentieth International Congress of Americans, which will be held in Brazil in connection with the 100th anniversary celebration of Brazilian independence this year. Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, has asked the President to come and deliver a paper on "Comarative Study of Racial Psychology." Dr. von KleinSmid is an authority in this field.

This congress embraces all the other organizations working for the spirit of Pan-Americanism on both continents. It will meet this year in Rio during the month of November. Its proceedings are always published and sent broadcast by the government. President von KleinSmid is the only man in Western America thus recognized. The tribute undoubtedly comes to him because of his long record in cultural relationships between the Americans. He has been honored with degrees by the National Universities of Mexico, Peru and Chile ad has been invited to speak while on his way to and from the conference in various points of Latin-America.

FINE MEXICANS ON LIQUOR CHARGE IN BURBANK

Nice Appearance and Good Conduct Wins Small Fines for Four

Charged with transporting liquor in Burbank, four Mexicans were fined following their arraignment Tuesday afternoon before Judge Crawford in the Burbank recorder's court. The fines assessed were:

Bill Sais, $40; Manuel Sais, $25; Navor Marquez, $25; Jim Marquez, $10.

Judging from the evidence submitted, the quartet only had a small quantity of liquor for their own consumption, which, in addition to the fact that they were neat in appearance, was the reason for the low fines imposed, according to the judge.

Jim Marquez's fine was the lowest because it was brought out at the hearing that he was not drinking at the time of the arrest.

Their employer spoke very highly of their conduct in the past, Judge Crawford stated.

The trial of H. E. Hastings and Harry Spates, both colored, who were also charged with transporting liquor and whose case was set for Tuesday afternoon, was postponed at the request of their attorney.

The date of their hearing was set for two weeks later. It appears as if the pair are doing all within their power to fight the case.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

KEEPING OUR LITERATURE PURE

Now for a literature censorship! Something has gotta be done to keep the American public "next to pure reading matter." Even the book-worm is beginning to turn. The American publishers are letting everything go to sexes and sevens . So say the reformers.

* * *

Many of the books being written by the modern young authors are so strong, it is charged, they'll eat the varnish off the library table. Set one half-pint 1922 model novel on top of a mahogany bookcase and it will leave a larger bare spot than a glass of present-day gin. Put a rose between the leaves of a book to press it; open the book 24 hours later and find a spray of poison ivy!

* * *

Place a book of smart fiction on the table beside the family album. Remove it three hours later and what will you find? All the family portraits blushing so furiously the album looks like a catalogue from the Maine lobster industry. 'Sterribul!

* * *

Too many modern books are mere pathological studies, it is claimed. The aim of the censors is to keep the reading public off the straight and narrow pathology.

* * *

A campaign to close the free public libraries may be expected at any moment. The Anti-Bookstore League is an immediate possibility.

* * *

The day when the booklegger will take his place beside the bootlegger seems near at hand. A prescription to get a copy of the new love story by Dabney Dudd, the rising young author of the neo-nut school of fictionists, may presently be required by law.

* * *

The truth is stranger than fiction, but the law is stranger than both.

* * *

Possible conversation a few years hence between a follower of modernist fiction and booklegger friend:

Bookworm: What have you in the suitcase?

Booklegger, furtively: Sh-h-h-h! Not so loud! Step over here behind this billboard. I gotta shipment of new novels by the best authors.

Bookworm, eagerly: The real stuff?

Booklegger, opening suitcase cautiously an inch or two: Hundred proof! * * * Written in bond * * * * private stock * * * * no foolin'!

Bookworm, suspiciously; I dunno; I'm a little afraid to take any chance. I bought six last month. They were all fake stuff.

Booklegger: You don't needa be fraid of these. I gootem from Canada * * * * No dillution * * * * strong as you can get * * * the real kick 'nd everything.

Bookworm: How much?

Booklegger: Oh, $120 a case of 12 books!

* * *

Most of the real reading will have to be done outside the 3-mile limit. Floating libraries will be the thing. No literary person may hope to be well read unless he owns a gasoline launch. The harbors off the Atlantic coast may be alive with people swimming on their backs and reading the latest fiction at the same time.

* * *

Exit the rum-runners! Enter the book-runners! The government will, of course, need a Right-Reading-Enforcement Fleet of former subschasers. Young men who went through Annapolis with the silly idea they might become admirals and die for their country will have to content themselves seizing fishing smacks full of stories like "Ursula Trent," "The Sheik," "Cytherea," "Eric Dorne," "Ulysses," and "Brass."

* * *

Nothing will get by but "Little Red Riding Hood" and the "Story of the Three Bears."

Some time ago Lord Leverhulme bought the small island of Lewis off the coast of Scotland. The new landlord, wishing to improve the lot of its 30,000 inhabitants, most of whom are small farmers and fishers, had his lawyer draw up a very elaborate contract to be signed by each tenant. It contained 26 clauses of stipulations. One old man, according to Lord Leverhulme, returned the contract unsigned and accompanied by this note: "I haven't been able to keep the Ten Commandments for the sake of a mansion in heaven, and I'll be damned if I'll agree to keep 26 commandments for a sma' hoose in the island of Lewis."

PRUNE CAKE
Mix one-fourth cup shortening, one cup sauce and one egg. Sift two cups of flour with one teaspoon soda. Add flour and one cup prune juice alternately, then one cup cooked pitted prunes and one teaspoon vanilla. It may be eaten with a pudding sauce.

A LECTURE ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Entitled

Christian Science The Divine Immanence

By

Peter V. Ross, C. S. B.
Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Delivered in the church edifice of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Glendale, California.

The lecturer was introduced by Mr. Dale G. Vaughan.

THE DIVINE IMMANENCE

If you and I were to glance out over the vast arena in which is taking place the struggle of mortals to reach the light of understanding, we might well wonder whether, among the innumerable problems confronting different individuals, there could be found one single problem common to all mankind and engaging the attention of every individual. But if we were to take more than a mere casual survey of the situation, and enter, if such were permitted, the inner consciousness of men, we should no longer wonder or speculate, we should see and know that bearing in upon the mind of every human being, at some time or another and with greater or less insistence, comes the question, What is the true nature of Deity? Who or what is God?

The man absorbed with the cares of this world may give little heed to this inquiry; the man at ease or in pleasure, may ignore it entirely; the man in the pride of intellect or in the exultation of worldly success may even affect to despise it; but come the question will, and every individual, in his better moments, will seriously meditate upon it, and some time, sooner or later, bitter experience will wring from him Job's pathetic cry, "Oh that I knew where I might find him!"

It may be said, perhaps, that this question does not occupy the thought of the infidel or the atheist, since he rejects altogether the idea of a Supreme Being. It will be found, however, that the man who proclaims that he does not believe in a God means nothing more than that he does not believe in the kind of God that has commonly been taught or portrayed. It is hardly conceivable that any thinking person would contend that the earth and the fullness thereof is a matter of chance or accident, and that there is no law or intelligence back of and directing the universe. It can safely be affirmed that whatever difficulties may beset the search for a Supreme Being, the belief that He exists and the desire to know Him are universal among mankind; and this confidence in the existence of God and this longing to understand Him indicate the transcendent importance to man of a correct concept of Deity, and remind us of Jesus' statement, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God."

NATURE OF DEITY

Now all down the centuries the Bible has taught and men have supposed that they have believed in a Deity who is not only all-powerful, all-knowing, and everywhere present, but who is benign and good—who, as St. John has said, is Love, and who, moreover, is available in time of trouble, and yet, in spite of this, disease and all the hosts of evil have seemed to hold almost undisputed sway. Evidently there must, after all, be a lack of appreciation of the true nature of God and our relation to Him, else the complete supremacy of good would be apparent, and evil would not seem to occupy the commanding place which it boasts in human affairs.

The trouble has been that, notwithstanding our profession and beliefs, we have regarded God as a sort of abstraction, far removed from our actual life and unavailable in times of distress. We have not fully accepted the assurance that His "hand is not shortened, that it cannot save." Whatever we may have said as to the nearness and goodness and availability of God, we have actually considered Him as separated from us and reluctant to supply our needs. We have pleaded with Him to come, instead of seeing that he is always with us; we have entreated Him to save, instead of knowing that already He has bestowed everything good and needful; we have besought Him to heal us and save our lives from destruction, when we should have realized that, as Paul says, "He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things."

What is needed, if men are to escape from the thraldom of evil and attain that fullness of liberty to which they are entitled, is a clearer discernment of the omnipresence, omnipotence, and omniscience of God—a fuller sense of the divine immanence. On a subject of such supreme importance, holding as it does the issues of life itself, inquiry should not and cannot rest short of exact knowledge. Blind faith or vacillating belief is entirely inadequate. "Ye shall know the truth," said Christ Jesus, "and the truth shall make you free."

This was the conviction which came to Mary Baker Eddy, when, something like half a century ago, the truth of being burst upon her thought at a time when a supposedly incurable malady was fast bearing her life away, and suddenly, while reading her Bible, she found herself restored to health and strength. Speaking of her experience on that occasion and of the cures effected in the early Christian era, she says on pages 109 and 110 of Science and Health: "I must know the Science of this healing, and I won my way to absolute conclusions through divine revelation, reason and demonstration." "In following these leadings of scientific revelation, the Bible was my only textbook."

Having discovered the Science of spiritual healing through her search of the Scriptures and her consecration to the teachings of Christ Jesus, it was most natural for Mrs. Eddy to name her discovery, "Christian Science." And since the time she discovered this Science, demonstrated it, and gave it to the world, mankind has had access to that exact and practical knowledge of the nature of Deity which enables it to appropriate the perfect gifts of health and happiness to which all people instinctively feel they have a right as the sons and daughters of a God who is good.

Being founded upon the Bible, Christian Science necessarily accepts the Bible definition of God as omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient; that is, as having all power, all presence, all knowledge. But Science does more than merely recognize the accuracy of this idea of Deity, it awakens us to the real import and significance of that idea, and teaches us how to make it operative in human affairs and in our tribulations. As showing this, let us take, to begin with, the concept of God as omniscient, and see to what conclusions, in the light of Christian Science, we are led.

DIVINE MIND

For Deity to be omniscient is for Deity to have all wisdom, all knowledge, all intelligence. Now what is the one short, everyday word which expresses all these? You at once answer, "Mind," and Mind is one of the names which Christian Science gives to God. It is one of the names by which Christian Scientists frequently address Him. In short, Mind is God. If Mind is God, or God is Mind, and there is only one God, it follows that there really is only one Mind, one consciousness; and God, being good and infinite, that Mind and that consciousness must be good and infinite. Manifestly, then, this Mind cannot know or experience disease or any other of the many supposed forms of evil. Therefore, they are not in fact known or experienced, since there is no other mind and no other consciousness to entertain their false pretensions.

Here is where Christian Science takes its high and at the same time practical position, and affirms that the ills of the flesh, and all else that makes for human limitation and suffering, have no actual existence. True, they may appear real to human sense, looking through a glass darkly; for the time being let us cling fast, if we may, to the absolute truth and judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment." So judging, we are irresistibly driven to the conclusion that divine Mind takes cognizance only of the good, the harmonious, the perfect, and does not cognize the imperfect, the discordant, the distressful. Hence you and I, the real you and I, do not cognize or experience them, because we cannot know anything unknown to infinite Mind.

What, then, do we know and of what are we conscious? Man exists as a state of consciousness, and as there is but one Mind or consciousness, man radiates or reflects that Mind or consciousness. Herein is the secret of man's dominion. Infinite intelligence is at hand, and not only is it available to man, but it is actually expressed by him. The mental forces and faculties of divine Mind are operative through the real man. Hence he is conscious of good, of health, of harmony, of peace, of power, of liberty; and the presence of these thoughts in consciousness necessarily excludes their opposites, namely, suffering, sorrow, sensuality, strife, and such like. The real man thinks what God thinks, knows what God knows, experiences what God experiences; and he thinks, knows, and experiences nothing else.

Now we begin to discern the unlimited range of the real man's mentality, for he is endowed with nothing less than all intelligence. Therefore, he is not lacking in the mental capacity necessary to perform any task that may be allotted him; he is not wanting in ability to see that human ills have no real hold upon him; he is able to realize that there is no actual affinity between himself and sinful desires and propensities; he rises to a sense of his true selfhood as an idea in divine Mind, embodying the qualities of that Mind, among which are health, harmony, and holiness.

MORTAL OR CARNAL MIND

In speaking of the divine Mind, Paul refers to it as that mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," and he counsels us to have that Mind, to the end that we may enjoy the same perfection, liberty and supremacy over the powers of darkness which Jesus enjoyed. But Paul also speaks of another mentaliay, which he styles the "carnal mind" and which he declares "is enmity against God." Mrs. Eddy refers to that mentality as "mortal mind."

The phrases "carnal mind" and "mortal mind" have not been coined to designate a real mentality, but rather to designate a false or supposititious mind, for in our present imperfect sense of things it is sometimes convenient to give names to the illusory and counterfeit in order that we may more certainly detect their invalidity and guard against deception.

This false mind, this mortal or carnal mentality, sends forth the appetites of the flesh, and with them disease and death. Its suggestions and insinuations are constantly clamoring for admission into consciousness. As a result we are continually experiencing the temptation to do wrong, to feel the pains of human ills, and to suffer the thousand and one forms of restriction and discomfort common to humanity. This silent, persistent influence is personified in the Bible as the devil, and James admonishes us to "resist the devil and he will flee." But our resistance has seldom been more than partially successful, with the result that sin and suffering have too often apparently gained the ascendency.

DEFENSE AGAINST DISEASE AND EVIL

Our failure to make a good defense has been due to our inability to resist intelligently. We have supposed that sorrow and suffering are the common lot of man, we have believed that disease and evil are inevitable and invincible, and we have feared them. In this mental condition we have been doomed to defeat from the outset. Here it is that Mrs. Eddy has rendered an inestimable service to humanity by differentiating between the divine Mind and mortal mind, making it plain that healthful and wholesome thoughts come from the divine Mind and have the quality of reality and permanence, while sick and unwholesome thoughts come from mortal mind and have only such seeming power or influence as we are misled into conceding.

Evil approaches us and asks to be admitted into our thoughts and lives, but it cannot enter unless we consent. It is in itself inert, non-intelligent. When we close the door of thought against it, as we have the ability to do, evil vanishes and ceases to be. It is only by opening the door and inviting evil to come in that we are brought under its sway. By our own act of acceptance or rejection we elevate evil to temporary power or return it to the realm of nothingness from whence it came.

A well-known writer, describing his visit to an institution for the care of people of deranged minds, says that he found there one man, a guard, in charge of seventy or eighty of the inmates. Addressing himself to the guard the visitor inquired, "Are you not afraid to be alone with all these people?" "Afraid? No, I'm not afraid," was the reply. "But don't you know," continued the visitor, "they might get together and make way with you?" "Get together" said the guard. "They can't get together. That's why they're here."

It is the very nature of the forces of evil to lack the intelligence, the energy, the ability to initiate or organize any effort or movement. They cannot, in the presence of an understanding of Christian Science, be effectively marshaled or set in motion. By bearing this truth in mind, we can disarm and nullify sinister schemes and organizations. All the supposed activities and possibilities of evil depend upon our fear of or belief in evil. When we boldly, intelligently, and persistently challenge it with the assertion and realization that good is the only power and presence, evil commences to shrink into nothingness.

Taking this vantage ground which Christian Science has won for us, we begin to see that mortal mind, with its embodiment of evil, is entirely foreign to true mentality and selfhood, and therefore without actual existence, because divine Mind is ever active and everywhere present. With vision thus clarified we can cope with human ills and infirmities successfully, expelling from consciousness the thoughts which produce or believe them, or, better still, closing the avenues to consciousness against the entrance of sick thoughts in the first instance.

Thus are we brought to realize that the omniscience of God means that a right state of mind—a consciousness of health, of harmony, of happiness— is now and everywhere present, even where sick or sinful thoughts may claim to be. This perfect state of mind, which is for every one to acquire, is heaven. Its enjoyment need not be postponed to a future world, but is attainable here and now by the mental or spiritual process which rejects the false and embraces the good and the true. Thereby may we all be "delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

MENTAL ORIGIN OF HUMAN ILLS

Christian Science constantly reminds us of the importance of shutting out of our mental home wrong thoughts of every description, and welcoming good thoughts only, for everything has its inception in thought. The harsh word would not have been spoken if the hateful thought had not been harbored; the evil deed would not have been committeed if it had not first been thought or planned; disease had never made its appearance if mortal mind had not first conceived and pictured it.

But some one may ask, "How can this be true in my case, for I never thought of this ailment of mine until it came upon me?" In reply to this question it may be said that we know very little of what mortal mind is thinking. Mrs. Eddy says, "The physical universe expresses the conscious and unconscious thoughts of mortals" (Science and Health, p. 434). When we desire to move the hand, we consciously give the mental order and the resulting movement is visible. We have no difficulty in observing the mental cause and effect. But that same mentality which directs and compels the hand to move also directs and compels the heart to beat, yet we are not conscious of the fact. Illustrations of this kind can be multiplied in connection with other organs and functions of the body, for there is unconscious as well as conscious mental action.

It is not necessary for a man to think specifically of rheumatism, for example, in order to have that ailment. All he need do is to hate his neighbor, and rheumatism or some other painful disorder will eventually fasten its hold upon him. It is not necessary that he should hate anybody or anything. Let him give way to fear or worry, and the human mind, thus distracted, will in time derange the functions of the body which it is directing. He need not even be fearful or worried. All that is required is for him to depart from the truth that he lives in divine Mind and accept the mistaken notion that he lives in a material body. Then, at some time or another, the images of disease inhabiting mortal mind are liable to take up their abode with him.

ORIGIN OF EVIL

Another may ask, "How is it, if mortal mind with its content of evil is mythical and unreal, that it seems to exert such an influence and to so disturb the equilibrium of things?" This is the old question of the origin of evil, which no one has so satisfactorily answered as did Jesus when, personifying evil as the devil, after the fashion of the Orient, the Master declared, "He is a liar, and the father of it." It is hardly worth while to search for the origin of a lie or to seek an explanation of it. Any such attempt is likely to result in imparting to the lie some semblance of truth or reality—the very condition which must be overcome if the pretended reign of evil is to be brought to a close. Searching for the origin of evil would, to adopt a happy comparison from a popular author, "like hunting in a dark cellar at midnight for a black cat that isn't there."

DEITY AS LIFE

From the consideration of Deity as Mind it is only a step, and a very short one, to the consideration of Deity as Life. The Bible plainly implies, if it does not expressly declare, that God is Life. Moses, in exhorting the Israelites to obedience to God, said to them, "He is thy life, and the length of thy days." John said, speaking of God in relation to creation and the beginning, "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." Paul, standing in Mars' hill and noting the Athenians' ignorance of God, proclaimed, He is "not far from every one of us; for in him we live, and move, and have our being." And again, in his letter to the Ephesians, the renowned apostle writes of "One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

Abiding thus in God and He in us, our life cannot be less than full, free, joyous, immune from disease, out of danger, and safe from destruction. In the past we have been too much inclined to conceive of God as absent from His creatures and His creation. We have recognized, "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory," but we have all but overlooked His very presence and His intimate relation to ourselves. Now through the teachings of Christian Science is our vision opening to His nearness, His immanence, His oneness with man; and we are no longer content to view Him only as the Supreme Being, but rather as Being itself; not alone as the source of life, but as Life itself, the only life of man and the universe.

PRAYER OR TREATMENT

It were almost sacrilegious to speak of disease in this connection. Yet humanity seems so borne down with suffering and misery that disease cannot be ignored. Indeed, Christian Scientists are not ignoring it, but are coping with and overcoming it to an extent which compels the attention of all thinking people. They are accomplishing this by discerning that with God as Life, and that Life perfect and everywhere expressed, there is no place or possibility for disease. Their method of healing is prayer, by which "more things are wrought," as Tennyson says, "than this world dreams of."

But prayer, as understood in Christian Science, is much more than merely asking God to give us the good things we seem to lack, whether of health or happiness or what not. It consists, rather, in silently realizing that already we possess all needed good and that the seeming presence of sickness or distress or want is not a fact but a false appearance. This mental attitude whereby we reject thoughts of fear and hate and disease, and entertain thoughts of health and love and confidence that "underneath are the everlasting arms," draws us nigh to God. Indeed, it brings us into that oneness with Him where all that the Father has is seen to be ours.

Right thoughts are invested power and energy, for they come from the divine Mind. By clinging to them we ally ourselves with omnipotent and omnipresent good. They are the word of God, quick and powerful to heal and to save. And every man, woman and child can, in large measure, think rightly, that is, insist that good is the actual and all embracing, while evil, whatever form it may try to assume, is an illusion, a falsity. In the presence of such thinking, sickness and suffering lose their place in human consciousness and pass out of experience. They can be no part of true existence, and multitudes of people are today proving this through scientific and intelligent prayer, through right thinking and right doing, which lifts them into that consciousness of Life harmonious which is God.

LIFE NOT IN MATTER

Throughout her writings Mrs. Eddy uses the word Life as synonymous with God, and she maintains, in unmistakable language and with flawless logic, that God is man's life. But in so doing she makes it clear that she is referring to spiritual man, and not the material concept. She affirms that life is not in matter and does not reside in the material body. In fact, she finally disposes of matter in that wonderful statement, familiar to all Christian Scientists and found on page 468 of Science and Health: "There is no life, truth, intelligence, nor substance in matter. All is infinite Mind and its infinite manifestation, for God is All-in-all."

It is admitted that matter seems intensely real to the human senses, and that the material universe appears substantial beyond peradventure. But even physicists now explain matter by explaining it away. Some of them define it as particles of electricity, negative at that, while others define it as bubbles or holes in the ether, which might be more satisfying if they did not follow up their definition with the statement that there is no ether, thus leaving nothing but holes in nothing. Why physics treats matter in this way, Christian metaphysics may be pardoned for insisting that matter is simply a mistaken concept of that which is spiritual and real. The human mind does not see things as they are. It takes a distorted or perverted view of everything, and this perversion or distortion constitutes what is called material existence.

The mistaken supposition that matter is real and that man has a material body is the source of mortal man's troubles and difficulties. With that false notion begin his limitations, his sinfulness, his suffering. Believing himself to be incased in a body of matter, mortal man is confined to the limited area occupied by that body, instead of enjoying the boundless freedom which belongs to his real self as a spiritual idea or child of God, Spirit. Because of the belief that he inhabits a body of flesh and blood, he is in constant jeopardy, the sport of accident and the lodging,place of disease, instead of realizing that man actually is an idea in infinite Mind, as immune from disease and as assured from injury as God Himself.

There need be no apprehension that through the renunciation of material belief the foundation of things will slip away or that man will lose his identity. Christian Science teaches that man's individual entity persists throughout eternity, never to be absorbed in Deity nor yet to ge disintegrated and lost among the shifting sands of time. And experience in the practice of Christian Science proves that the more one dwells in the spiritual sense of existence, the more do beauty and perfection and permanence become apparent, for the false concept of things, which has obscured the real, passes away. The world of nature begins to appear "appareled in celestial light," the world of humanity commences to lose its blemishes of mind and body, and the individual finds himself growing "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

GOD AS LOVE

Closely related to the idea of Deity as Life is the concept of Deity as Love. Christianity has always associated love with the Supreme Being, though perhaps more as a characteristic or attribute than as a synonym. But Christian Science recognizes that while in one sense love is an attribute, an all-pervading quality of God, yet in a fuller sense Love is God, or as St. John puts it, "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."

The deductions to be drawn from the conception of Deity as Love are most inspiring and liberating to suffering humanity. Take all the sickness, sorrow, and misery that appear to run riot in the world about us. Could they be imposed upon mankind by a Supreme Being who is Love? "Unthinkable and impossible," you reply. Could such things be made or countenanced by a Creator who is Love? The response is an emphatic "No." From whence then are they and by whom created? Christian Science replies that they have not in fact been created and that they have no actual foundation or existence, because the one and only creator, power, and presence is Love. The same is true of all the hate, malice, and strife that seem to infest society. They are the very antitheses of Love and hence can have no actual influence or potency when Love is infinite and omnipotent.

Any one who chooses can begin at once to prove this momentous truth; and having proved, though perhaps only in minor details, that discord, whether in the form of bodily ailments or of mental disturbances, can be put out of experience, he will be ready to admit and able to see that the sum total of human wretchedness can be disposed of on the basis of its unreality and nonexistence. This can be done by intelligently and assiduously giving place in thought to the good, the righteous, the things of Love, and in rejecting from thought the evil, the sensual, the things of the devil. Every one has it within his power to demonstrate that as he permits love to fill his consciousness and expel love's opposites, he loses his sense of evil and his suffering from its plagues.

It has always been understood that the harboring of malicious and malevolent thoughts is destructive of character and peace of mind. It is now being realized that this same unhappy and abnormal state of thought is disastrous to health and results in bodily and mental derangements of the most serious nature. The world is largely indebted to Christian Science for this enlightenment, and is fast learning that righteous thinking and living are not only essential to sound character but to sound health as well. Good health and good morals go hand in hand.

DIVINE PRINCIPLE

Mind, Life and Love are not the only synonyms or appellations for Deity recognized by Christian Science. Spirit, Soul, Truth and Principle are also synonymous or identical with God. The use of the word "Principle" in this holy office may, at first impression, be questioned, but as its meaning is fully comprehended, it will be seen to be no less apposite than the terms already considered. In fact, its immutable and enduring quality runs through them all. Everything that is good, true or permanent is founded on Principle. All right action, energy, intelligence, or life has its vitality and operation by virtue of indwelling Principle. Mind, Life and Love could not be such, if Principle were not their basis, substance, and animating impulse.

The boundless universe which we look out upon moves in perfect accord with what is called the law of gravitation. No place or point of which we can conceive, however distant or remote, is outside the operation of that law. Not a particle of dust so mean, not a heavenly body so splendid, but yields glad obedience to that unseen, unerring, irresistible influence.

This reign of law in the so-called material universe is typical of the unlabored, unobstructed action of Principle in the real universe—the universe of Mind, Life and Love in which we have our actual being. The human senses would have us believe that confusion and turmoil abound on all sides, but reason protests against such apparent absence of law and order, and spiritual sense discerns that since omnipotent Principle is everywhere operative, discord is an illusion and harmony is all in all.

Once it is realized that the divine Principle Love, is everywhere in operation and effect, the tyranny of hate and strife is broken, and "on earth peace, good will toward men" is seen to be a present reality. Human fear, superstition and ignorance lose their fancied power of deception, when it is discovered that the divine Principle, Mind, "lighteth every man that cometh into the world" and guides and governs all thongs from the least unto the greatest. Disease, which is ordinarily either too much or too little action in some part of the human system, either an undue acceleration or obstruction of the bodily functions, is healed when it is recognized that God's law is never obstructed nor accelerated, but is everywhere in constant, normal, uninterrupted operation.

Jesus referred to Principle as the Father, when, having in mind his healing of the sick and his resuscitation of the dead, he said, "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." And Jesus made clear the availability of Principle to every man when he further declared, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." Today it is being demonstrated in Christian Science that any individual who will try to understand the Master's teachings and live up to them, can, at least in some degree, feel the presence, the contact, the power of Principle, which heals the sick and reforms the sinner as certainly now and here as when Jesus walked the streets of Jerusalem or taught on the hillsides of Galilee.

THE DISCOVERER OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Thus in our generation has come the day, prophesied by the poet, "When God is seen with men to dwell." It has come through the discovery of Christian Science by Mary Baker Eddy. She has brought God down from His throne beyond the clouds and made His presence a conscious reality in the minds and lives of men. Here and there throughout the ages individuals in moments of inspiration have discerned the nearness of God, indeed have felt their oneness with the divine nature, but however distinct may have been the vision to them, they could not clearly define or impart it to others. It remained for Mrs. Eddy not only to glimpse the divine presence, but to retain what she saw and portray it in such unmistakable terms that henceforth humanity should have no excuse for not apprehending the truth of being. She has established by actual proof that the same power which Jesus employed to relieve human distress centuries ago has never departed from the earth, but is an ever-present law to be invoked by all who will make the effort to understand Christian Science.

If there has been any event in modern history more remarkable than the discovery of Christian Science, that even has been the successful establishment of Christian Science on an enduring foundation. To discover this Science required rare spiritual insight; to so establish it that the truths of Christianity should not again be lost to sight, required unsurpassed sagacity, resolution, courage and devotion. These qualities were possessed to a superlative degree by Mary Baker Eddy, which answers the oft repeated question, Why did Christian Science come through a woman?

To a world sick with its belief in materialism, intellectualism and skepticism, as well as sick with sin and disease, Mrs. Eddy has brought a workable means of regeneration. For the suffering and sorrowing she has made known a divinely prepared way of escape. Those who are availing themselves of the opportunity thus provided hold her name in love and reverence, while people the world over are coming to recognize her as one of the foremost benefactors of the race. She has fulfilled Emerson's prophecy: "When a faithful thinker resolute to detach every object from personal relations and see it in the light of thought, shall at the same time kindle science with the fire of the holiest affection, then God will go forth anew into creation."

REVOLVER SHOTS HEARD ON BRAND

The residents of South Brand boulevard were alarmed late last night by the report of a pistol shot, fired by an unknown person. Patrolman Wurtz telephoned to headquarters and Officers Kerns and Boucher investgiated, but could find no one in that region. However, they reported a suspicious-looking automobile in which a lone man was riding. This car bore the license number 467,869, which was afterward found to be the license number of a Studebaker touring car.

'THE STORM' WINS BIG AUDIENCE AT T. D. & L.

In its way one of the grandest film plays ever presented to the people of Glendale, "The Storm," achieved a decided success at the T. D. and L. theatre yesterday.

House Peters played the hero of this story, which comes from the pen of Langdon McCormick. He is ably supported by Matt Moore, Joseph Swichard, Virginia Valli, and others. The work of each of the actors is superb, and the resulting production is away above par.

One man in the triangle of the story is afraid of women because he knows nothing of them—has never seen anything of them. He's a woodsman, primitive and honest. The other is a product of London and Paris society. He fears the gentle sex because he has seen too much of them. The woman in the case is an innocent French Canadian girl, forced through circumstances to live with the two men through many long months. They are snowed in.

The scenes of the mountains as they are in the fall, then the coming of the snow and later the snowbound cabin, deep in the heart of the woods; the wonderful escape of Virginia and her father from the hands of the "riders"—all are wonderful, but the big feature of the play is the devating forest fire, which sweeps everything before it, finally taking the cabin in which the three lived.

The struggle of the two men for the love of the girl. The love of one is illicit; the affection of the other is pure big hearted and wholesome. It is a question as to which love will triumph, but by clever work the author brings in the finish that proves popular with all who see the play. It is a remarkable picture and one well worth witnessing.

As a support to "The Storm" Harold Lloyd in "Follow the Crowd" creates a whole world of genuine laughs. In fact, he's a scream, nothing less.

No World Tennis Champion

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—No world's championship is recognized in tennis because the United States and England never have been able to agree on a tournament for the title.

England now maintains that the British championships at Wimbledon carry the world's championship, but the United States will not admit it. Even when William T. Tilden won twice at Wimbledon, the United States would not recognize him as the official world's champion.

* * * * * * *

The trouble was caused by the action of the British association and the International Tennis Federation in awarding the world's championship in perpetuity to Wimbledon.

The United States has maintained that the championships should be alternated, so that America should get to see some of the world's tournaments and at the same time should not be forced to carry the financial burden of sending players every year to England.

* * * * * * *

Some conferences are to be held this winter and it is almost sure that the difficulties will be patched and that the United States will agree to enter the International Federation.

* * * * * * *

Pressure has been brought to bear by the English public to allow the championships to alternate between England and the United States.

Other suggestions also have been made. The United States is said to favor a plan whereby the title would be defended in the home country of the champions. European nations would object to this, no doubt, because America looks to be in for a long reign of supremacy on the courts.

* * * * * *

Gerald Patterson, captain and veteran member of the Australian Davis cup team, suggests that the tournament for the world's championship be played in the country where the Davis cup is being defended. This looks like it might be another monopoly for the United States on the same grounds.

* * * * * * *

Tennis is becoming such a great sport that the officials of the game recognize the need of universal, standard rules with the supervision of an international committee. If the United States would join the international federation it could be brought about.

* * * * * * *

Some changes also may be made this winter in the Davis cup rules. Some criticism was made this year over the method of deciding where the preliminary rounds are to be played. Where there is too much traveling involved, the smaller nations have to default when they are called upon to raise the big fund to foot the bills.

* * * * * * *

One of the British authorities, pointing out the tremendous expense that some countries face in getting a team through the preliminaries, suggested that the cup be contested for only once in three or four years.

Baseball Prospects in 1923

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Regardless of what success the New York Giants have in the 1922 pennant race, the team will have to be strengthened to do as good or better next season.

Looking at the 1923 season this far in advance, it will take a real team to beat the Cubs, the Reds and the Pirates next year and McGraw hasn't a whale of a team, unless he gets some pitchers this winter.

Perhaps Jack Scott will get his arm back this winter. McQuillin may go better and Barnes may get bcak to winning form, but it is a gamble.

* * * * * * *

Fans are wondering where McGraw will place Jimmy O'Connell, his $75,000 beauty from the Pacific coast. It is apparently the Giant leader's purpose to play him in the outfield, because he had the San Francisco club switch him from first base and give him a year in the outfield.

McGraw often has said that it takes at least one year on the bench to make a real Giant player, but it is inconceivable that he would allow a $75,000 article to hide within the shadows of the dugout.

To get a place in the outfield, O'Connell will have to displace Irish Meusel, Pep Young, Casey Stengel or Bill Cunningham. Stengel, of course, was a freak this season and he could be displaced, but many critics from the Pacific coast consider Cunningham a more valuable player than O'Connell.

* * * * * * *

After what the team did this year, the experts hardly will consider the St. Louis Cards seriously in the future unless some changes are made in the club.

The Cards had the grandest chance in the world to win the National League pennant this year. The Giants were hanging around almost inviting a defeat when the Cards turned over.

Many of the sages blame the collapse of the team on Branch Rickey, the theory expert and blackboard manager of the club.

They claim around the circuit that Rickey disrupted his pitching staff, that he burdened his club with so many signals and trick plays that they were at sea most of the time.

It is a cinch that something blasted a good pitching staff. All during the hottest part of the mid-season battle, Rickey used three and four pitchers every game. He also made a funny move when he benched Jack Fournier, a good first baseman, and put in his place Bottomly, a rookie, whose misplays lost a number of critical games. It also was a funny move to use rookies in the outfield in important series.

* * * * * * *

Under Bill McKechine, the Pittsburg Pirates have been given new life. The Pirates have looked like pennant winners for several years, but something was always wrong with the team and it looks on the surface like the trouble rested with the management. If the Pirates do not win the 1922 pennant, they will be the ranking favorite to cop in 1923.

* * * * * * *

In the American League, the Yanks, Browns and Tigers no doubt will fight it out all the way with the White Sox as the dark horse. The Yanks should be better in 1923, the Browns ought to be improved with the chance that their young pitchers will be better and if Ty Cobb gets his hands on one more good winning pitcher, Detroit will take a lot of beating before they lose.

TREASURY SAVINGS CERTIFICATES ATTRACTIVE

Federal Reserve Director Makes Announcement of New Prices

The secretary of the treasury has just made an announcement of special concern to readers who are holders or prospective investors in treasury savings certificates.

Summarized briefly, Secretary Mellon announces that, commencing October 1, 1922, a change takes place in treasury savings certificates which then and thereafter will be issued in new form only at the following prices:

$1000 certificates for $820, instead of $800.

$100 certificates for $82, instead of $80.

$25 certificates for $20.50, instead of $20.

Also, that the sale of $1 treasury savings stamps will be discontinued then.

Meanwhile, the present issue of 4½ percent certificates can be purchased until September 30. You will render a distinct service to your patrons by acquainting them at once with this announced change in treasury savings certificates. It means a reduction in interest yield from about 4½ per cent per year to 4 per cent, compounded semi-annually, if held five years to maturity; and from about 3½ per cent per year to 3 per cent if redeemed before the 5-year maturity period.

In view of steadily declining interest returns on all desirable securities the new 4 per cent treasury savings certificates announced are very attractive investments, providing, as they also do, ideal means of saving with absolute safety and liberal interest; ready cash if withdrawn.

Any individual or organization can own from $25 to $5000 worth of treasury savings certificates issued in any one year. They can be obtained at all money-order post-offices and at federal reserve banks, and from or through most other banking institutions.

An Irishman saw an advertisement one morning for musicians at the local movie house, and, being a bit of a violinist, he applied for a job. He was accepted and given the 'cello to play.

When the conductor gave the usual signal for the orchestra to commence, all he could hear of the 'cella was an awful din and screeching noise.

He called the orchestra to a halt, left his stand, and went up to the Irishman.

"What's the matter, Pat?" he asked. "When are you going to start?"

"Start!" echoed Pat. "Why, I can't get the darned thing under me chin!"

STATE HOUSING ACT IS MENACE SAYS BUILDER

There will be several important matters up for referendum at the coming November election. One that is creating no little amount of comment just now is the act which will appear on the ballot designated as the state housing act. A prominent lumberman has given the Daily Press the following article on this act, which he says should be defeated:

"The Burnett bill, passed at the last session of the legislature and known as the state housing act, is up for referendum in the November election.

"Vote NO on this act, unless you want to see yourself, your family, your friends and your community victimized by one of the most outrageous pieces of class legislation ever enacted in the United States.

"If this act becomes a law, it will be illegal for you or anybody else to build a home with a shingled roof—bungalow, shack or mansion—in any city, town or incorporated community in the state of California.

"The bill has been accurately described as 'a woodpile wrapped around a nigger.' It is designed to benefit hugely the manufacturers of substitute roofings, at the expense of the average townsman of moderate means who wants a shingle-roofed house because it costs less to build, is more attractive when built and lasts twice as long as the substitute for shingles he will be compelled to use if the act becomes a law.

"The act has been formally repudiated by the state immigration and housing commission. It is unscientific. It is against the public interest. Nobody wants it except the special interests that lobbied it through the last legislature."

Sweet Daddy!

YOUR chance to electrify the dance-bunch is right-now-to-night, for Ray Miller and his men-of-music are in again on the new Columbia Records with a couple of wallops that'll keep toes tickling long after most folks have battened-down-hatches for the night!

You'll go along, all right, with "Come Along" (I'm through with worryin'!), for it's an irresistible fox-trot that the Millerites just eat up!

Then, switch over to the far-side of the record and you draw "Two Little Wooden Shoes," another pippin fox-trot picked in the garden of good tunes and also played by Ray Miller and His Orchestra. You'll have to toss a coin to name the winner between the two. Ask your dealer for Columbia Record A-3671—75c—and get yours.

The October offering of new Columbia Records is a harvest of dee-licious music. Every one is a gem. Tear out this list and ask your dealer to play the whole works. Columbia new process Records being free from surface noise are superior to any others.

Rose Garden Policies

By JOHN BRECK

To the world of roses, armament is the vital question; for the flower having definitely committed herself to the policy of wearing thorns is confronted by circumstances which seem almost to demand a change in her constitution—a very serious steps. "Would she still be a rose without them?" asks the conservative element of the rose body politics. "Will she survive at all if she wears them?" is the gloomy retort of the radical constituency. So she is hung on the prickery dilemma of her own making.

It is no longer a question of how many thorns per inch of stem she can afford to grow, but how many she dare dispense with. As a matter of fact, the modern civilized rose doesn't need them; she no longer contends with the nibble of woodland deer or the rasping tongues of the cow pasture. It is the enemies of the air which threaten.

Their name is legion. Aphids drain her sap, leaf bugs blast her buds, or moths curl her leaves into tubes where their voracious grubs lie hidden while they bore their way into her expanding blooms. The spiny-legged little beetles who do their courting among her sprays do not commit their ravages in the open. Their insidious attack is at her roots, where their unregenerate offspring will succeed them. She is a nursery for a score of insect young, from the saw-fly larva who cradles in her stems, to the great caterpillar of the hawk moth, with a pricker as big as her own astern—all burst from bombs dropped by hostile airplanes.

The moss rose's bristles do not stop them, crawlers being especially designed to slip by obstructions. They merely sift her host of afflictions, keeping the larger ones lower down, and giving cover to the tiny thieves who lot her tops. Think of the constant graft on that plant's treasury! Her only real defence is her mercenaries, who fight her battle for their own personal gain. Wasps do their best by the wasps; they have no altruism, but many mouths in the nest and a vital demand for rose-fed squirmers to feed them. Every ichneumon is cradled and fed on the saw-fly's young, while the brilliant chalcids plant their eggs in the aphids, under the very antennae of the guardian ants. And spiders help—themselves.

But the climbing rose concedes that big appetites make fast work. So she grows out of tongue reach, and disarms all she dares to offer pleasant perching for the warblers. This is false to rose ideals, every bush a state unto itself. But since she cannot guard her boundaries, she will let her losses be turned into another's gain. She is wise, for self-interest is the mainspring of industry.

BARBER SHOP DATE APPEARS

DURANGO, Colo., Sept. 21.—The "barber shop date" has made its appearance in Southwestern Colorado. Bobbed hair is the cause, according to local barbers.

It's no unusual occurrence for a young man to treat his lady fair to a "bob" or trim, while he declines in the next chair to be shaved, massaged or shampooed.

Barbers declare that several couples make it a point to meet at the barber shop for their dates. Or else after a rendezvous at some soft drink parlor, they stroll over to the shop for a hair trim and keep up conversation while the barbers do the work.

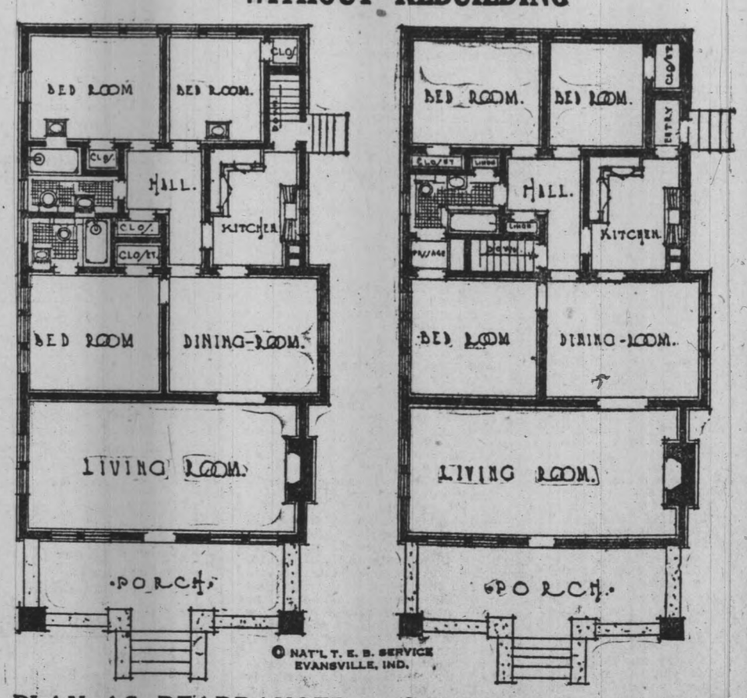
PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS FOR INEXPENSIVE ADDITIONS TO HOME COMFORT AND HEALTH —WITHOUT REBUILDING



PLAN AS REARRANGED AT MINIMUM EXPENSE

ORIGINAL PLAN

Six-Room Bungalow With Property Value and "Liveableness" Greatly Increased

Because of today's conditions, many households are much interested in the problem of how to expand bathing and toilet facilities without new building.

By way of suggestion this paper will print a series of plans, (of which that above is the first) to indicate how practical improvements of the sort referred to can be made at moderate expense.

These plans are all designed to avoid undue interference with regular house-keeping activities, and can be put into effect with but little muss or fuss. In detail, none of the plans may exactly fit your house; but among them there is sure to be found some practical, usable suggestion.

This six room bungalow has been made into a home much more convenient and healthful by the added bath room shown.

Reference to the original plan, in comparison to the new one, shows that the change has been made with remarkably little added or altered construction. No feature of real advantage in the original plan has been sacrificed. The added showers, the baths, and lavatories in two bedrooms are a comfortable convenience out of all proportion to the added cost.

Added medicine or toilet cabinets over each lavatory would be enormously convenient too.

By such changes, many otherwise inadequate dwellings could be made infinitely more desirable, at a moderate expense which would disappear entirely in added property value.

Your plumbing dealer would be glad to confer with you about such a change. Very often a small closet can be converted into a beautifully inviting bathroom.
